Nine Dairies To Sell Milk On Doctors' Certificates

All Distributors Ordered to Serve Qualified Buyers, Some in Homes

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The area's nine strike-bound dairies were ordered opened last night for cash-and-carry sales to all persons presenting doctor's certificates testifying to their need for milk.

The "medical emergency plan," hurriedly devised by union and employer officials during day-long meetings yesterday, also assures home delivery to persons physically unable to make their own purchases.

Home delivery also will be on a cash basis.

The nine dairies will remain open from 6 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily for pickup sales. The dairies and their addresses are:

Lucerne, 2040 West Virginia ave. ne.

Embassy, 1620 1st st. nw.

Alexandria, 334 N. Pitt st., Alexandria.

Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Pensylvania ave. and 26th st. nw.

Wakefield, 41 L st. se.

Richfield, 1230 S. Capitol st. Thompson's, 2012 11th st. nw.

Model Farms, 4115 Kansas ave. nw.

Harvey, 38th and Perry, Brentwood, Md.

Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young, said doctors would issue milk certificates to these general categories of persons:

(1) Nursing Mothers; (2) infants under 2 years old; (3.) persons suffering from ulcers or cancer; (4.) persons suffering from tuberculosis, malnutrition or those recovering from an operation, and (5.) "all persons whose health will be jeopardized by lack of milk, according to an attending physician's certification.

On home deliveries, arrangements were made for Metropolitan police to pick up doctor's certificates, and dairies agreed to make the deliveries.

The whole plan grew out of charges by local physicians that the existing plan, covering hospitals and public institutions, with only one public dispersing point for the public, was "wholly inadequate."

General scope of the new emergency plan was agreed to unanimously by both sides of the four-day milk dispute at a morning meeting in the District Building called by the District Commissioners.

The participants adjourned to the Wardman Park Hotel where the operational details were worked out in a closed-door session. District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger and Stofberg conducted the conference.

The medical emergency plan will cover all Washington, Alexandria

Milk Strike Peace Talks Lag Through Another Futile Day

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A management telegram to the union which had to be answered before the meeting could proceed stymied the milk strike negotiations at 10:30 p. m. last night.

The fourth day of futile sessions at the Wardman Park Hotel broke up when the union representatives found they couldn't answer the telegram without consulting persons who were unavailable.

An answer is expected when negotiators resume at 10 a. m. today, according to Federal Mediator Henry Baker. No details about the telegram were released.

The telegram was the latest in a series between the nine greater Washington dairies and the AFL employes.

Management and union representatives spent most of yesterday working out details of an emergency milk distribution system, and in wrangling over legal points in management's insistence that all nine firms had been struck, and the union's contention that a strike had been called against only three companies.

The settlement talks went into virtual suspension about 9:30 p. m. Monday, shortly after the union made a new peace proposal.

Management's reaction to the union's latest formula was decidedly unenthusiastic, but the com-

Sawyer Seeks To Halt Job Cut In Commerce

Secretary Bases Plea On Importance of Work for Defense

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer has urged the Senate to exempt his department from the House-approved Taber-Thomas and Jensen riders.

He made his plea on the ground that much of Commerce's work is closely related to national defense. In addition, he said the safety work of Civil Aeronautics and Coast and Geodetic Survey would be hampered. The riders to the general appropriation bill would make sharp cuts in the jobs and budgets of most Federal agencies.

Sawyer has made available to Senate members a statement from each of his major bureaus on how it would be affected by the riders. A summary follows:

WEATHER BUREAU: T-T would force the firing of about 500 full-time employes, and about the same number of part-time observers. Offices and weather stations would have to be closed. Weather forecasts would be curtailed and the collection of weather information cut back.

The Jensen rider, to allow agencies to fill only 10 percent of their vacancies, would be "extremely damaging," the Weather Bureau said, "since it would tend to eliminate low-graded, full-time positions, and to progressively reduce our network of part-time and fee observers."

PATENT OFFICE: T-T would compel an immediate cut of 125 employes in addition to 75 others recommended by the House. Patent Office's 2000-man staff would be reduced to about 1800.

This reduction, the office said, would result in a "severe production loss" as it would be barely able to keep up with the current flow of new patent and trade-mark applications. It would be unable to liquidate the huge backlog of 220,000 patent and 40,000 trade-mark applications.

Furthermore, the Jensen amendment would knock off an additional 225 employes during the next year.

CAA: The Civil Aeronautics Administration, to operate under the T-T rider, would have to close 15 additional aeronautical communications stations; 16 airport traffic control towers, and discontinue 20 percent of the airway light beacons. Its report didn't mention the number of employes that would have to be fired but the number is in excess of 1500. The Jensen rider, CAA said, would make matters worse.

WNA: The international terminal building at the Washington National Airport here would be closed. It would be questionable

Potomac Park Fire Wrecks I Barracks

3 Alarms Sounded For Fierce Blaze In Navy Structure

Three alarms early today sent fire apparatus rolling to a former Navy recreation building and mess hall on the polo grounds at West Potomac Park. The temporary structure was burned out before the flames were controlled about 40 minutes later.

The blaze was discovered almost simultaneously by Benjamin Suls, 52, of U. S. Special Police, who was making the rounds of the area, and by Sergt. Jack Hobbs, of U. S. Park Police, cruising by at the time.

Flames were shooting 25 to 30 feet in the air when the first fire apparatus arrived in response to an alarm at 1:01 a. m. Another alarm was sounded at 1:18, and a third at 1:32.

So far as could be ascertained immediately the building, designated as I Barracks, was unoccupied. It was reported as being reconditioned for use by the Census Bureau, due to move in Friday.

All available motorcycle policemen and scout car officers in the downtown area were called to the scene.

Marshall Makes Speech Cut Off by War 10 Years Ago

Lexington, Va., June 13 (AP).—A musty manuscript dated June 12, 1940, was unfolded by Gen. George C. Marshall today as the former Army Chief of Staff addressed Virginia Military Institute's graduating cadets.

It was a manuscript Marshall never got to use.

He had intended using it to address the 1940 VMI seniors. But Nazi legions swarmed through Paris that June 12 and President Franklin Roosevelt summoned Marshall to Washington immediately.

In that speech, Marshall planned to say:

"This is a day of high emotion for you men. It may also be one of the most fateful days in the history of the world."

Today, Marshall spoke the lines—and said they were every bit as applicable now as 10 years ago.

Otherwise, the former Secretary of State advised the departing cadets to value highly the heritage of VMI—also Marshall's alma mater.

Marshall's address was the closing highlight of VMI's four-day commencement program. Among the awards were the following:

First Jackson Hope Medal for scholarship: Cadet Robert K. Warring, jr. of Palmerton, Pa.

Second Jackson Hope Medal: Cadet Forrest W. Getzen of Dade City, Fla.

Net Gain of 1 in Population At Leesburg Bucks the Trend

In fast-growing northern Virginia, the town of Leesburg has set something of a record for census growth: From 1940 to 1950, it has increased by just one resident—1698 to 1699.

Preliminary Census Bureau figures released yesterday show that all Loudoun County—like its county seat and biggest town of Leesburg—has not grown much.

The county population in 1940 was 20,291. The 1950 provisional statistics records an increase of just 772—a total of 21,063.

But Loudoun seems proud of its status.

"Thank God in Loudoun County we've still got space to breathe," they say.

The Loudoun County figures complete the count for a census district that includes Loudoun, Alexandria, Arlington, Prince William and Fairfax Counties, and Falls Church.

The figures show that this area has increased from 169,521 to 346,010 in the last 10 years—an increase of 104 percent.

In counties, Fairfax has shown the greatest percentage increase with a growth of about 143 percent. Arlington County's percentage comes next—137 percent.

As for communities, Falls Church has grown about 200 percent. Leesburg's growth counts just one-smithereen of a percent.

$750,000 Gas Rate Boost Set Aside

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

The $750,000 rate increase granted the Washington Gas Light Co. by the Public Utilities Commission in November was set aside yesterday in District Court.

Judge T. Alan Goldsborough ruled that the PUC acted "arbitrarily," "cynically," and "illegally" in four respects when it ordered the 6.14 percent rate increase.

The entire $750,000 increase was set aside by Judge Goldsborough. If the PUC order is rewritten to incorporate the judge's findings, consumers would save $500,000 of the increase granted, and 1949 rates would be upped only $250,000.

PUC experts were "not corrupt" in arriving at their decision, the judge said, "but their only future lies in connecting with a public utility and, therefore, their natural bent is towards the public utility. They don't expect to be with the PUC forever."

Gas bills will not decrease immediately.

Quick Appeal Planned

Both the PUC and the company said they would appeal Judge Goldsborough's decision at once, and ask for a stay of execution, pending appeal, of his decision to set aside the rate increase. If granted, as expected, this stay would maintain the present, increased rates.

Specifically, Judge Goldsborough ruled that the PUC erred:

1. In allowing the company to include $1,744,000 worth of abandoned property in the 32-million dollar rate base on which the PUC said the company was entitled to a fair return.

"Property has to be used and useful to be included in the rate base," he said.

2. In allowing the company to include $2,797,000 in this rate base, representing the "unamortized costs" of converting consumer appliances to handle natural, instead of manufactured, gas.

"This is clearly, purely an operating revenue and cannot be used in the rate base," the Judge said.

3. In allowing the amortization of the $1,744,000 worth of abandoned property, at a cost of $199,000 per year.

"This clearly should be eliminated as a part of operating revenue," he said.

4. The PUC rate increase order "seems not only to be retroactive, but gives financial advantage of thousands of dollars to the utility," the judge continued.

Signed November

The order was signed November 7, to become effective with meter readings taken on or after November 16. Judge Goldsborough pointed out that since meters are generally read only once a month, meters read on November 16 would include gas consumed as much as 23 days before the rate boost was approved.

"The court rules that provision is arbitrary and without standing," Judge Goldsborough said.

In his 30-minute oral decision, Judge Goldsborough said he would

Acheson Hits 'Intimidation' Goal of Reds

Dallas, Tex., June 13 (AP). Secretary of State Dean Acheson charged tonight that Russia is using its armed might and Communist plotting in other countries as a "poised bludgeon to intimidate the weak."

The Secretary said there are four ways the United States can meet Soviet pressure—but he immediately ruled out isolationism, appeasement and the idea of a "preventive war" with atomic bombs.

The United States, he said, will continue to follow a realistic policy of peaceful negotiation and strengthening the free world, in the hope that Russia some day will become "our good neighbor."

"War is not inevitable," Acheson said. "It is our responsibility to find ways of solving our problem without resort to war, and to exhaust every possibility in that effort. That is what we intend to do."

Imperialism is Challenge

In a major foreign policy review prepared for the Civil Federation of Dallas and the community course of Southern Methodist University, he said that "Soviet Imperialism" is challenging the free world by military preparations that "have gone far beyond the reasonable requirements of defense," and by the international Communist movement. That movement, he said, seeks to destroy the capacity and the will of non-Soviet nations to resist Soviet ambition.

"I do not believe this creates an immediate danger of war," he went on. "But it is a poised bludgeon to intimidate the weak, and it does confront the world with the possibility that the Soviet leaders, whenever they feel that they are strong enough, may be tempted to make use of military force as an instrument of their policy."

He scorned isolationism as a means of meeting the problem. Acheson said that would be "to pull down the blinds and sit in the parlor with a loaded shotgun, waiting." He said the policy would not work and would be far too costly in armaments.

Appeasement of Soviet ambitions, he declared would "encourage Soviet Aggression" and lead to a final struggle in which both the American moral and military position would be seriously weakened.

"There is a third course of action which might be considered in earlier times and by another type of government and people than ours," Acheson said. "That is, that we should drop some atomic bombs on the Soviet Union. This course is sometimes called by the euphemistic phrase of 'preventive war.'

"All responsible men must agree that such a course is unthinkable for us. It would violate every moral principal of our people. Such a war would necessarily be incredibly destructive. It would not solve problems, it would multiply them.

"Fortunately, there is a fourth

Remington Posts $5000 Bail After Denying Perjury Guilt

New York, June 13 (AP).—William W. Remington pleaded innocent today to a perjury indictment charging he lied to a Federal grand jury when he denied he ever was a Communist.

The Commerce Department economist—now resigned—was held in $5000 cash bond for trial. Federal Judge John W. Clancy said he would announce a trial date July 5.

Bethuel Webster, Remington's attorney, told reporters that 14 surety companies had refused to put up bail. He quoted them as saying they would post bond "for prostitutes and murderers, but never where loyalty is questioned."

Judge Clancy refused to cut the bail in half, but agreed to give Remington two days to raise the money. It only took him a few hours, however.

Throughout the proceedings, Remington remained calm and silent except to say "not guilty" firmly when asked how he pleaded.

Conviction on the one-count indictment carries a maximum penalty of $2000 fine and five years in jail.

Remington was cleared of disloyalty charges by a Loyalty Review Board. Long a target of congressional investigations, he was named two years ago by Elizabeth Bentley as one who gave her information to be passed to the Russians. Miss Bentley, who accused Alger Hiss and Whittaker Chambers, is a self-styled former Soviet spy ring members.

Army Procurement Short Cut To Speed New Weapons Flow

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Army has adopted a procurement short cut in an effort to get its promising new defensive weapons now under development into the hands of troops as soon as possible.

Even with this speedup, however, it is clear that the time is several years off as far as the most important of them are concerned. While some of the new tanks and anti-aircraft weapons may be ready within two years, it probably will be more like five for the more revolutionary anti-tank and tactical atomic arms.

The shortcut planned has been used before for promising new aircraft, but not previously in peacetime for Army weapons. It involves placing procurement orders for equipment before field tests of experimental models have been completed. Nice judgment and some element of risk are involved, for though time is saved if a winner is developed, always short procurement money is lost if the project fails.

Procurement of some of the new 28-ton light tanks is planned even though the tank has not been fully tested. But the agile and air-transportable tank with "fluid drive" looks so good that the risk is con-

Mysterious Haze Hiding Sun Over Much of Pacific

Honolulu, June 13 (AP).—Dense haze blanketed 1,200,000 square miles of the Pacific today. The Weather Bureau said almost anything from windblown African desert sands to an atomic explosion might be the cause.

The sun disappeared behind thick overcast "like it never had before."

The haze stretches from Wake Island, 2000 miles west of Hawaii, to an area east of the Hawiiian Islands. It is thickest over Wake, rising to 16,000 feet.

Prevailing winds indicated the haze might have originated in explosive eruptions in the New Guinea area or farther southwest. The Mauna Loa eruption on Hawaii might have contributed, it was said.

"A concentration of ions could result in such a condition," it was said.

Ions, electrified particles, break loose when an atom is split.

Crime Witness Tells of Aid To Democrats In Missouri Race

A St. Louis racing news distributor yesterday told Senate crime investigators that he contributed $2500 to the 1948 campaign of Missouri's Governor Forrest Smith.

The man is William Molasky, who once served 18 months in a penitentiary for cheating the Government on his income tax.

Molasky said he made the political contribution to Smith's Democratic campaign manager at Jefferson City, the State capital.

In reply to a reporter's question, Molasky said he never saw or knew Charles Binaggio, the slain Kansas City Democratic political figure. It was Binaggio's murder that led Governor Smith to toss out the police board that controlled the Kansas City force.

Molasky's story of his business interests presented a picture of a man who has been drawing a $28,600 salary, plus dividends, for doing little more than signing his name to checks.

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) and other committee officials gave a summary of Molasky's testimony. With Molasky while he testified under oath was his attorney, Morris A. Shenker. When St. Louis "Betting Commissioner" James J. Carroll recently testified before an-

Social Security Liberalization Debate Begins

Senate Agreement On Measure Is Expected Soon

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday opened debate on a House-approved bill to bring 10 million more persons into a liberalized Social Security system amid forecasts of "universal" old-age insurance coverage in a few years.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) said he hoped within the next year or two Congress will enact "a sound Social Security system which affords equitable protection for all citizens."

Two Senate Republican leaders joined in the forecast.

"As I see it, there will have to be wider coverage, leading perhaps to universal coverage," Senator Eugene D. Millikin (Colo.), ranking GOP member of the Finance Committee, told colleagues.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio) agreed. He termed the bill a step "in the direction where ultimately there will be universal coverage of every person over 65 years of age."

Only one Senator took the floor against the bill as the long-delayed legislation partially fulfilling campaign pledges of both parties started through the Senate.

Senator Hugh Butler (R., Nebr.) proposed scrapping the present "unjust, undemocratic, uneconomic" Social Security structure and substituting a "constructive" program financed by income taxes.

In general, however, the bill faced smooth going, with party helmsmen on both sides of the aisle predicting passage next Monday or Tuesday.

So optimistic was the Senate

Bill Provides 7 Months' Retention of Regulation

Cities Given Option Of Retaining Curbs For 5 Months More; Counties Win Voice

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 202 to 163, the House yesterday agreed to a seven-month continuation of Federal rent controls, with local communities having the power to continue the controls another five months.

The measure now goes back to the Senate, which on Monday approved by a 36-to-28 vote a similar measure extending controls six months with a six-month option.

The Senate can either accept the House changes with the January 31 expiration date instead of the December 31 expiration date, or it can send the measure to conference to iron out the difference. The present law expires June 30.

The House version would give the new Congress, meeting in January, a one-month view of the rent picture before controls expire in communities not taking positive action to extend them.

Covers 8 Million Units

The law will cover some 8 million rental units, which one of the proponents estimated will affect some 32 million persons. That figure, however, includes New York, which already has its own rent control law.

The vote on final passage came after the Administration forces beat back, 226 to 143, a Republican-led drive to send the measure back to the Banking Committee. The motion to recommit was made by Representative Jesse P. Wolcott (R., Mich.).

On final passage, 171 Democrats, 30 Republicans and 1 member of the American Labor Party voted for the bill.

Voting against were 45 Democrats and 118 Republicans.

Cities, towns and villages, by referendum or by a vote of their governing body, can retain controls until June 30, 1951. But the measure does not affect nearby Virginia areas already decontrolled by action of the State Legislature.

The House measure also differs from the Senate bill in giving counties an opportunity to decontrol themselves at any time.

Judd Amendment Wins

The amendment extending the time of mandatory controls by a month was offered by Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.), who said that it would enable State legislatures, most of which meet in January, to enact their own rent control laws if needed.

Judd argued that extension of the date would save an enormous amount of litigation. Doubts as to the constitutionality of the Congress passing power direct to local communities to continue Federal rent controls in their areas have been raised in both houses.

3 Children Die, Baby Stillborn As Home Burns

Oakland, Md., June 13 (Spl.).—A flash fire today killed three children and critically injured three adults, one a mother who bore a stillborn infant after the tragedy.

Fire apparently followed the explosion of a gasoline-powered washing machine at the frame home of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Ash when a neighbor, Mrs. Grace E. Knox, tried to start it. She and the Ash couple were critically burned.

Witnesses said the house seemed to burn down within minutes as flaming gasoline was scattered across the kitchen. Rushed to Garrett County Memorial Hospital, Mrs. Ash gave birth to the stillborn child.

Two of the five Ash children, Tommy, 5, and Peggy, 2, burned to death. So did the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. Knox, who had come over to the Ash's house to do the laundry and help Mrs. Ash get ready for the maternity ward.

9 Dairies to Make Certificate Sales and nearby Maryland communities.

This is how qualified residents must go about getting a milk ration:

Anyone physically able to purchase milk at a dairy must first obtain a certificate from a physician. The certificate will specify exactly how much milk the patient or family is entitled to purchase for two days' consumption.

Milk will be sold across the counter or from refrigerated trucks directly outside all dairy headquarters. Upon presenting the certificate customers will receive the prescribed amount.

The milk will be dispersed by union members, with company personnel maning the cash registers. On each sale, attendants will stamp the certificate showing the date of purchase.

Residents are warned not to surrender their certificates as the same ones will serve for the duration of the strike.

Police to Cooperate

Home delivery will work in the following manner: First; the attending physician must certify the need for milk-to-your-door service. Upon filling out such a request, doctors will notify Metropolitan Police headquarters (Executive 2060).

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett has agreed to send scout cars or motorcycle policemen to pick up these certificates at doctors' offices and take them to a "central clearing house." This will be Room 5080 at police headquarters.

There, officials, representing all dairies, will sort out the home delivery requests and decide which dairy will make the delivery. Home deliveries, also, will be every two days.

Officials urged all customers to turn in empty bottles when they buy milk.

Local dairymen said last night they had ample supplies in their plants to meet last night's sales.

Persons who do not have regular physicians may seek certificates at the District Medical Bureau, 1710 M st. nw., Theodore Wiprud, District Medical Society secretary, said last night. The bureau telephone number is Republic 6100.

Patients of Health Department clinics should consult the District Health Department, National 6000.

Doctors to Cooperate

Following the Wardman Park meeting, Wiprud told reporters he was certain doctors would cooperate in every way possible. "If any bugs develop in the plan we will be coming back to the union and employer officials asking for revisions," he said.

He further warned that the biggest bottleneck in putting the system into operation would be the job of writing up the certificates in doctors' offices.

Before agreement on the dairy pickup service, employer spokesmen proposed that distribution points be set up at the city's 14 police precincts.

Union me nobjected to the precinct plan on grounds the dairy management would come in for more credit under that proposal.

The Chestnut Farms dairy, largest in Washington, reported a "phenomenal" sale of nearly 500 quarts of milk over the counter from 6 to 9 p. m.

McMillan Resolution

At the Capitol, Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.), chairman of the House District Committee, introduced a joint resolution to permit the importation of pasteurized milk into Washington. He said his commitee would consider the question this morning.

The resolution authorizes the District Commissioners to issue a temporary permit to outside producers to meet local milk or cream shortages. Now such producers must file permits by the first of each year and have approval of the District Health Department.

Stocks of milk in homes, restaurants, hotels and stores varied from zero to adequate, depending on ability to tap a source of supply.

Housewives were queued up all day before the 65 nonunion High's dairy stores. The stores quickly sold out two morning and two afternoon deliveries.

Run on Nearby Dairies

Business at nearby Virginia and Maryland dairies not affected by the strike was reported as "terrific."

Safeway and DGS stores said their milk stocks were "nil." Four Shirley Food Stores in nearby Virginia said they sold 40,000 quarts of milk yesterday, brought from an unidentified Virginia plant.

Hotels Running Out

Bourbon Dawes, executive secretary of the Hotel Association of Washington expected the majority of hotels to run out by tonight. Most restaurants lacked milk, Robert Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association reported, and used whole milk for cooking, canned milk instead of coffee cream.

Richfield Dairy, selling emergency milk stocks, had no figures on its output yesterday, but said a line of 12-15 persons moved outside its plant most of the day.

Some 300 mothers, many carrying babies, milled about in protest yesterday when District Health Department inspectors banned sale of milk imported from Baltimore by Posin's Bakery-Delicatessen, 5756 Georgia ave. nw. Only dairies certified by the Health Department are permitted to sell milk here.

Calls on Milk Swamp Police Switchboards

Police switchboards were jammed early last evening because of a public misconception of the department's role in the new "emergency delivery" program.

Householders apparently believed police not only would pick up physicians' certificates for milk to be sent to homes, but also deliver the milk.

Under the system, physicians are to call Executive 2060 to make the arrangements.

'White Mart' In Milk Found In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, June 13 (UP).—A "white market" in milk appeared in Pittsburgh today on the fifth day of a strike of milkmen.

In a typical instance, one man drove to Washington, Pa., 30 miles away, purchased 100 quarts of milk for 19 cents and sold it to a tavern operator for 26 cents.

The resale price to the public was 30 cents, but it sold out within an hour. With regular milk supplies shut off to 3 million persons in seven counties, the practice was reported spreading.

In other developments in the strike:

1. State police, ordered by Governor James H. Duff, to keep milk trucks moving on State highways, arrested four pickets at a Westmoreland County dairy. The county is not among the seven involved in the strike.

2. Emergency deliveries to institutions and hardship cases improved as the machinery set up to handle the cases began functioning more smoothly.

3. During the night bricks were thrown through windows of two Pittsburgh dairies which had continued selling milk. There were no arrests.

Signs advertising "milk for sale," turned up along rural roads leading to Pittsburgh.

pany representatives never did get around to rejecting the proposal formally.

Instead, the peace talks were abruptly shoved aside while the negitiators got into a wrangle over the union's charges, filed with the National Labor Relations Board, accusing the milk processing companies of unfair labor practices. Specifically, the union charged that around half of the union's 1650 members were locked out bl six plants.

Then there followed through Monday night and Tuesday an exchange of telegrams between management and union in which each side jockeyed for position with an eye to the NLRB's preliminary investigation initiated by the union's complaint.

The union—Local 246, International Brotherhood of Teamsters—maintains that it has struck and picketed only three dairies: Harvey, Wakefield, and Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase.

The union contends that it has been locked out by Embassy, Model Farms, Alexandria, Richfield, Thompson and Lucerne. Management holds that the union struck all nine plants at 11:30 a. m. Saturday, and that the union came up with its claim of a strike against but three of the plants as an afterthought.

The telegraphic exchange, though adding nothing helpful to the peace talks, was important to the principals, inasmuch as the union asked the NLRB General Counsel's office to obtain an injunction to force the reopening of the six "locked-out" plants.

After filing its charges with the NLRB Monday afternoon, the union wired the six companies that "your employes stand willing and ready to return to work unconditionally and immediately."

Speaking for the industry, Lucerne wired the union yesterday morning that it "accepts" the union offer, provided the union members return to work at all nine dairies, under the terms of the old contract, for a period of at least a year.

The union countered with another telegram carrying an "unconditional offer" to return to work in the "six locked-out plants."

Lucerne replied with a demand that the union "fish or cut bait." The company wire asked a number of questions about the meaning of union's "unconditional offer," and just why the union wanted to go back on the job in six but not nine dairies.

The union came back with a charge that management was deliberately impeding negotiations.

Meanwhile, two weary but persistent Federal mediators, Martin J. O'Connell and Henry Baker, doggedly kept the negotiators in session. The meeting running from 2 p. m. Monday to 1 a. m. Tuesday and continued without stop.

Last proposal in the air was that of the union asking for a 5½ day work week and 7-day plant operation, without loss of pay. The milk drivers have been on a 6-day week.

Management has held that any reductin in the work week would have to be accompanied by a reduction in plant operation from 7 to 6 days a week.

The union contends its members will lose take home pay in a 6-day plant operation, insisting there would be a jamming up of weekend deliveries, a drop in service, a decline in customers, and aresultant loss in pay.

Management says that the price of milk would rise prohibitively if it granted the union demands without closing down all operations on Sunday.

South Still Tough, China Reds Admit

San Francisco, June 13 (AP).—Communist China's boss says the North is well in hand, but the Reds haven't whipped the densely populated South into shape.

He blamed "American imperialism" for some of the trouble and sees at least three years before "a fundamental turn for the better."

Mao Tze-tung, chairman of the Chinese Communist Party, concedes (1) the South is beset by 400,000 Nationalist guerillas; (2) has a land problem, (3) its industry and commerce are out of gear, and (4) has unemployment and an unstable social order.

Mao's report was made June 6 to the Party's Central Committee. The text was broadcast today by the Peiping Radio and heard here by the Associated Press.

Mao called for trimming the Communist army this year—but only "on condition that it guarantees sufficient forces to liberate" Formosa and Tibet, consolidate China's defenses and suppress anti-Red guerillas.

The "imperialist camp" still holds the danger of a third world war, Mao asserted.

He gave this picture of Manchuria and north China, where 160 million Chinese first came under the Red banner:

"Agrarian reform has been completed, social order has been established, economic construction has begun to proceed on the right track, improvements have been made in the standard of living of the majority of the laboring people, the problem of unemployed workers and intellectuals has been solved or is nearing solution, and in the northeast (Manchuria) planned economic construction has begun."

'I'm 128,' He Says, And Feeling Great

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
FRANCISCO CAMACHO of Brownsville, Tex., told a skeptical census-taker he was 128 years old and offered this reasoning to prove it: His nephew's mother, who is 78, was born when Camacho was 50. He still enjoys good sight, and hip pain doesn't bother him sidered a good one. Orders for pilot models of the new medium and heavy tanks—which will be lighter than prior vehicles—is not planned before the 1952 budget.

New-Weapons Flow Speeded

In the anti-aircraft field quantity orders have been placed for the 75-millimeter, fully automatic Skysweeper and new fire-control equipment for present 90 and 120-millimeter guns. With the new gear, the latter should be capable of tracking new high-speed planes, though all the "bugs" are not yet eliminated.

Most of the other and probably more important new defensive weapons are not yet even in the stage where field tests can be held. A great deal of work has been done on the "shaped charge" antitank shell for recoilless rifles, but considerable development effort still is ahead.

Perfection and procurement of this "answer" to Russia's huge tank superiority and its companion weapon—the "squash-head" artillery shell—may be a few years off. So may be the Loki anticraft rocket shooting down planes in the substratosphere, while guided missels for the same purpose also still are to be tested.

Even farther distant may be atomic artillery, and the ground-to-ground guided missiles with atom warheads. But most of land warfare experts are convinced by the research and development work already done that they are practicable and need only time, effort and money—particularly the latter—to make them realities.

In pushing the development of A-weapons for tactical use in land battles, soldiers feel that greater accuracy than is possible with aerial bombing is required lest the attack fail or backfire.

Furthermore, artillery can be fired at night and in any weather with nearly the same accuracy as in clear daytime conditions, something not now possible with aerial bombardment.

What the Army is seeking in atomic artillery is a shell that can be fired from conventional type field guns—perhaps of larger size than those now in use—with a warhead full of fissionable explosive, not radioactive waste. Such weapons, of course, would be handled by special crews and be employed only against rare and highly profitable targets.

Dr. Bush Discusses New Weapons Abroad

Paris, June 13 (AP).—America is developing a powerful new land weapon to smash any Russian invasion of western Europe, a leading United States atomic scientist said today.

Dr. Vannevar Bush, wartime head of United States scientific research and development, described the weapon as "a marriage of the bazooka and the recoilless gun." He added it is one of the most important developments since the last war.

With this and other strategic weapons, Bush declared, "relatively small and well-equipped land forces should be able within four or five years to hold off any Soviet tank-led invasion of western Europe until United States power comes to the rescue."

Dr. Bush, now president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, D. C., addressed the American Club of Paris.

Chance to Thrive

Economic Difficulties of Philippines Regarded as Great But Not Desperate

This is the third in a series of articles on the situation in the Philippines by a veteran correspondent and writer on Far Eastern affairs.

By Harold R. Isaacs

Manila, June 13.—Like the military situation, the economic problems of the Philippines are difficult but not desperate.

This rich archipelago of only 20 million people still has every chance to thrive, given a willingness to break through obsolete social and economic molds, an austerely determined regime. Together with popular participation in a great common effort and intelligent outside aid, the Philippines might have a much better chance for the future than most of the former colonial countries now trying to make their way in an inhospitable world.

But there is at present no such bold attack on problems of development. Instead, ugly new growths are forming on a war-ravaged colonial-type economy in which all the worst abuses of a feudal and obscurantist past have been preserved.

Both business and government in the Philippines function for the most part like a leech on the body politic, sucking its substance and giving it nothing back.

The bare bones of the economic picture can be sketched as follows:

1. Between 1946 and the end of 1949, the Philippines imported goods at about two and a half times the prewar rates, while its exports reached only 80 percent of its prewar volume. Serious import controls were imposed only in the last few months.

2. The adverse balance was covered primarily by American disbursements of various kinds, totaling $1,800,000,000. Some of this money went to rebuild buildings, roads and bridges. But the bulk of it returned to the United States to pay for imports, much of it food, no small part of it luxury goods. Only an estimated 12 percent went for capital goods, and an additional 18 percent for raw materials that went into construction. There was a spree of a kind. There was also prodigal waste and some monumental thievery, as in the notorious case of the war surplus goods. Manila is dotted with millionaires who grew in the surplus dumps. Its merchants made a fortune out of the import business. Except for rehabilitation of the sugar industry, and some rebuilt structures, there is little else to show. American payments are down to 218 million dollars this year and will drop to 100 million dollars or less next year. What new assistance, if any, should be given, and how it should be given, is the issue now directly before American policymakers.

Industries Gain

3. Filipino industries have come back slowly. By prewar standards sugar is back 70 percent, abaca (hemp) 49 percent, mined gold 39 percent. Copra and vegetable oil products have taken first place in exports, but the high prices for all these products have not brought the quick growth that might have been expected. Food crops have been good, but food imports have been heavy, nonetheless. The prospect for next year in this respect is better, in view of a carryover of 50,000 tons of rice.

4. Gold reserves slid from 409 million dollars at the beginning of 1949 to 251 million dollars last December 8 when exchange control was finally instituted. (An estimated 80 million dollars simply fled in the last quarter before controls were put on.) With the controls relatively well administered, there has been a slight improvement to May 31, with stocks of dollars at 260 million dollars. If import controls work without undue abuse and dollars are kept in hand, a belt-tightening improvement is promised this year.

5. Government expenditures, legitimate and illegitimate, have soared. The budget is nearly five times prewar size. A year ago the rising deficit sounded warning signals, but in the absence of a regularly voted budget, President Quirino began resorting to appropriation by executive order. The deficit in the general government fund rose from 41 million pesos a year ago to an estimated 400 million pesos this June 30. (Some government critics say it is over 500 million pesos.) Some payrolls have been missed, with teachers, as usual, bearing the first brunt. Deficit financing has been resorted to, the government quickly borrowing up to the legal limit and no one knows how far beyond.

6. Tax collections are faulty. In the Philippines the bulk of revenue (33 percent) comes from excise taxes. They go easy on income taxes (producing only 17 percent of the revenue). The rates are low, going up to 40 per cent for the topmost brackets. But even these taxes are not effectively collected. There is large-scale nonpayment and large-scale sieving of receipts.

One specialist here guesses that proper tax collection would raise receipts "anywhere from 50 to 100 percent." A Filipino economist guessed it would increase the take by a third. New tax bills are before Congress, but by the rules of Filipino politics it would be surprising if they really set out to extract revenue from those who can really pay it.

Inflation Debated

One succinct summary I was given went like this: No money, less revenue, no new retrenchment, more borrowing, hell to pay. With import and dollar controls on, the result will be heightened inflationary pressure, rising prices, increased popular hardship and, unless a halt is called somewhere, a breakdown in government services. The most pessimistic say this might occur in a year. The optimists expect it in two years. Government supporters scoff and say it won't happen at all.

But whatever the ultimate outcome, one thing is plain: There is no money for development. With every centavo needed to meet budget deficits, even the government's meager programs will suffer, and they have been something less than adequate up to now. An economist in a big Philippines bank estimated for me that the local capital market might, under favorable conditions produce up to 150 million pesos a year for long-term investment. But there is no sign now that this money will come out of its counting houses. There is too much quick money to be made by milking the country. Hence, in the absence of both public and private capital, the basic economic problems will remain not only unsolved but untouched. The result will obviously be aggravated social and political conflict, the still further fall of the government's fiscal and political credit, and all the consequences that can be expected therefrom.

This is the basic picture that will confront the new American economic commission due to come to the Philippines. President Quirino agreed only a week ago, after months of futile pressure and counter-pressure, to accept a purely American commission instead of a joint Philippines-American commission like the one that reported here in 1947.

Ambassador Myron Cowen's object was presumably to win maximum independence and assure maximum toughness for the commission. What that commission recommends and what reaction it gets here if its recommendations are tough, may well decide the fate of the Philippines for a long time to come.

For what it is worth, I can report that Filipinos of almost every political shade, excluding outright Quirinistas, have said to me in effect: "We hope the United States will put on pressure for real changes here. Only a demagogue can raise the issue of national sensitivity and the issue will be a false one if American recommendations are obviously for the public welfare in this country. Such pressure will get immense support among us. The worst thing will be if the United States, in anti-Communist panic, simply decides to prop up the regime as it now stands."

Tomorrow: Corruption and political chicanery rife in the Philippines.

Truman Urged To Drop Envoy To the Vatican

President Truman was urged yesterday to "end, once and for all, the 10-year anomaly of semiofficial diplomatic relations with the Vatican."

Glenn L. Archer, executive director of Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State, sent a telegram to the President saying that many Americans "rejoiced in the resignation of Myron Taylor from his post as the President's 'personal' representative at the Holy See."

He added that "your continued silence on the question of whether or not the 'temporary' mission is now to be officially terminated has given rise to a fever of speculation as to our future course, accompanied by increasing tension among religious groups."

ACHESON—From Pge. 1

way of dealing with these problems, and that is to work on them in cooperation with other nations, and by means of peaceful negotiation to resolve our differences. This has been and is our policy. It has been the consistent policy of President Truman, through four Secretaries of State, that the United States should direct its efforts to this purpose."

Acheson explained, however, that there is one big obstacle to negotiation: The expectation of Soviet leaders that the non-Soviet world is headed for collapse and their desire to expand their control.

"The one difference which is just about impossible to negotiate is someone's desire to eliminate your existence altogether," he observed.

"Our experience has convinced us that, so long as the leaders of the Soviet Union can entertain hopes for early expansion into areas of weakness in the world, there is no likelihood of their entering into genuine agreements for the resolution of our common problems, or of honoring those agreements which we now have."

The military strength of the free world must be adequate to deter Soviet leaders from any rash adventures, and must be reinforced by economic, political and moral strength, Acheson said.

20 Billion for Arms

London, June 13 (AP).—Soviet Finance Minister Arseny G. Zverev told the Supreme Soviet in Moscow tonight he estimates Russia will spend 79,400,000,000 rubles for defense in 1950.

Under the official rate, four rubles equal one dollar. Some authorities estimate the ruble's purchasing value at about five cents.

Yugoslavia Protests Red Curbs on Danube

Belgrade, June 13 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav Foreign Ministry protested to Russia today against alleged Soviet interference with free navigation on the Danube River.

A note delivered to the Soviet Embassy here said that "the Soviet military authorities recently introduced in Austria the practice of forcing all ships to register their intention of sailing through the Soviet section of the Danube eight days in advance."

Council of Europe Wins Bonn Test Vote

In Commons

Attlee Says Britain Backs Europe Unity

London, June 13 (NYHT).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee today told Commons the Labor government is "fully prepared" to cooperate with nonsocialist governments in seeking closer economic integration of Europe.

His statement was designed to remove fears that yesterday's declaration on European unity by the Labor Party's National Executive Committee amounted to a firm refusal by the government to join in any economic or political unification of western Europe.

Attlee promised that the Labor government would "be in the forefront" of impending moves to pool resources and surrender sovereignty in order to strengthen the defenses of the Atlantic community.

The party declaration rejected any idea of Britain's yielding any of its powers to a supranational authority that, it said, would obviously be dominated by non socialists, and ruled out British participation in any European economic union that would not conform to Socialist principles.

Attlee insisted the Labor Party statement was "not a government statement."

But it is doubtful that he succeeded in allaying the widespread fear on the continent and in Washington that the Labor government is fundamentally opposed to various proposals for the integration of western Europe, including the Schuman Plan for pooling coal and steel resources.

However, the government's policy toward the Schuman Plan may develop as the scheme becomes clearer, it is obvious that the Labor Party's observations on it constituted a serious blunder.

Publication of the declaration conflicted sharply with the policy of Attlee and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin, who wanted to avoid any public comment that might be construed as an attempt to torpedo the Schuman Plan.

Details of the program are expected to be worked out at a six-power conference in Paris opening June 20. Britain is deliberately staying out of the conference because it refuses to accede to a French demand that the general principles of the plan be accepted before the details are clarified.

Bonn, June 13 (AP).—The West German government won an easy victory in a test vote today on its proposal to join the Council of Europe.

Only two small right-wing factions joined Socialists and Communists in opposing a motion to move the measure along on the calendar for a final vote Thursday. The four parties together control only 155 of the 402 seats in the Bundestag, or lower house.

Political circles said the action was indicative of how the house would line up on the proposal to join the consultative assembly of the European Council at Strasbourg. The council, made up of representatives from 12 west European nations, can debate and make recommendations, but has no real legislative power.

A flurry of fist fights broke out shortly before the Bundestag began its debate.

Max Reimann, West German Communist leader, was barred from the paliamentary sessions for 30 days for allegedly starting the ruckus. Reimann led a 14-man Communist delegation in a tumult of protest against a resolution condemning the East German Communist government for ceding eastern territories to Poland.

Bundestag President Erich Koehler recessed the session when Reimann insisted in being heard on the question. Anti-Communist deputies began kicking and swinging their fists when other Communists surrounded Reimann and resisted the efforts of guards to remove him.

Badman Flees Dachau Second Time in Month

Munich, Germany, June 13—(UP).—Homer Cook, 27-year-old Oklahoma badman, escaped tonight from the Dachau prison for the second time in a month.

The former boxer was to have been tried next week on 19 charges, including two earlier jailbreaks.

Point Four Bill Reported Out By Rules Unit

The House Rules Committee yesterday sent to the House legislation for Government insurance of private investments in undeveloped areas in the world.

Under the measure, investments, up to a total of $250,000,000, would be insured against confiscation, and there would be certain guarantees that foreign currency profits from such business enterprises could be converted into dollars.

Speaker Rayburn (D., Texas) said the bill may be considered later this week.

By sending the bill to the House, the Rules Committee reversed a position it took only two weeks ago.

It refused then, by a vote of 5 to 4, to clear it for House action.

Yesterday, the committee voted 6 to 5 to reconsider its action, and then voted 7 to 4 to send the bill to the House.

Houdek, Who Quit Czech Post, Permitted to Remain in U. S.

NYHT News Service

The United States yesterday granted political asylum to Vladimir Houdek, who resigned as permanent representative of Czechoslovakia to the United Nations last month declaring that his nation had become a submissive vassal of Soviet Russia.

Although Houdek was a faithful member of the Czech Communist Party right up to his break with the Prague regime May 16, the State Department found sufficient indication that the break was genuine and that Houdek would probably have to pay with his life if forced to return.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the State Department has allowed a member of the Romanian Legation to make two overnight trips beyond the immediate environs of Washington to which the Romanians have been confined since May 25.

Last week and again yesterday, Ion Nitescu, Third Secretary of the Romanian Legation, visited New York with travel permits stamped by Stanley Woodward, Chief of Protocol.

In his first application, Nitescu said he wanted to go to New York to meet two couriers of the Romanian government. In his second request, Nitescu said he wanted to escort the couriers back to New York to see them off for the homeland.

In both cases permission was promptly granted. The State Department is determined to allow the Romanians precisely the same degree of free movement that Romania permits Americans in Bucharest.

Because Nitescu gave as his reasons for travel the facilitation of an official mission, it will now be possible for the United States legation in Bucharest to make strong request for permission to send American representatives to Constanza, the Black Sea port where supplies for the legation are unloaded.

The State Department, in announcing that Houdek would be allowed to stay in this country, said his "public statements indicate that Mr. Houdek can retain no ties with the Czechoslovakia Communist dictatorship."

Were he to be returned to Czechoslovakia, the State Department added, "his life would, of course, be forfeit, other potential defectors would be effectively discouraged, and the Communist security apparatus would thereby have gained a marked benefit."

Good News for lovers of fine coffee!

Edwards cuts your coffee bill without cutting quality!

Always pennies less...always fresher by days!

With Edwards, you enjoy the finest in vacuum-packed coffee—yet save pennies on every pound. You enjoy rich coffee... yet keep your purse strings tighter... make your food budget lighter! And the proof: compare Edwards—and its price—with other nationally known coffees. You'll soon discover—like families coast to coast—there's no finer buy in quality coffee today

Edwards' straight-line "Speed-Fresh" method cuts pennies off the price... guarantees quality

This modern system of coffee distribution has no equal anywhere! Edwards is roasted fresh to your SAFEWAY'S order... in small batches. Rushed to SAFEWAY by truck, it's immediately placed—fresh and fragrant—on the shelves. No huge warehouse lots,.. no long weeks of warehouse "sleep," losing flavor. No extra, costly handling. Edwards goes straight-line... from roaster to the coffee display at SAFEWAY. Your store gets it faster, you get it fresher—by days!

That's the A-B-C of how Edwards cuts your coffee bill. That's why Edwards is so wonderfully rich and fragrant... every tin, every time... uniformly rich, uniformly fresh. Next time you're at SAFEWAY, buy a fresh pound of Edwards. You'll delight in both the saving and the coffee!

Some facts about coffee today that may help you when you shop

Because of high prices, you may have temporarily tried some coffee that was priced much cheaper—and been disappointed... found it a little stale. The reason why it was cheaper was probably this: it may have been roasted many weeks before coffee prices rose to their highest level. Result: old coffee, low price. But no bargain at any price.

Many coffees today, because of their higher price, claim you can make ever so many more cups per pound—"stretch" their use. Frankly, we believe you want to enjoy your coffee, not water it. You can make only so many good cups of full-flavored coffee per pound. If it's rich, if it's fresh, like Edwards... it does go further... anytime—not just when prices are high.

No one knows for sure what coffee prices will be in the future. But Edwards Coffee can promise you this: whatever the price of coffee, Edwards will always cost you pennies less than other vacuum-packed brands of comparable high quality. The sooner you start enjoying Edwards, the sooner your savings begin.

Always rich coffee.....
Fresher by days.....

21 Senators Demand Full Amerasia Probe

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Twenty-one Republican Senators yesterday demanded a full Congressional inquiry into the 1945 Amerasia case. But, although they won the first skirmish on their motion, the probability is that they will not get the investigation they want.

The resolution, offered by Senator Capehart (R., Ind.), asked that the Senate Judiciary Committee conduct a broad and complete study of the role of the Justice Department in the case—specifically,, its investigation and prosecution.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of a Foreign Relations subcommittee that has been studying the Amerasia affair for sevaral weeks along with other charges of Communist infiltration in the Government, tried to sidetrack the resolution, asking that it be held "on the table."

Blocked By Capehart

This could have been done only by unanimous consent, which Capehart blocked. The resolution, however, may never come up on the Senate floor for a vote. Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.) voiced Administration opposition. He said, "We certainly are not going to have two Amerasia investigations going on."

This would indicate that the only way action could be taken on the resolution would be consideration on one of the so-called "calendar days," and a single objection could block it.

Tydings argued that the Senate should be patient, and that the very questions Capehart and the other 20 Republicans wanted examined had long since been taken up by his subcommittee.

The subcommittee5s report, it is clear, will contain a sizable section on the Amerasia story. In particular, it will probably go into some ond, paradoxically, may be a renewed series of allegations to the been something amiss or underhanded about the Government's past action in the case. The section. Tydings said yesterday that he had written replies, in the subcommittee record, to a long series of questions on the case put to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover.

The Amerasia case involved the illegal posession by the small, now defunct magazine, of hundreds of classified Government documents. Ever since the arrest of six persons involved, and the relatively light sentences—applied against only two of the suspects—there have been charges that the case was whitewashed and that a "coverup" operation was conducted.

Meanwhile, there were reports that a "runaway" grand jury in New York, which inquired into the Amerasia case on its own initiative, may adjourn on Thursday without returning any indictments on the case. If it takes no action, after once having decided to investigate and hear several witnesses, two results may be expected.

The first may be a severe dampening of the ardor of those who have been insisting that there has detail on the Justice Department's views and action in the prosecu- effect that once again the Administration has succeeded in hushing up the affair and putting on "the fix."

There were indirections yesterday that Tydings may be moving to wind up his subcommittee's 3½ months of inquiry, brought about by charges of Senator McCarthy.

To Study 81 Cases

Members of the subcommittee plan today to resume their reading of the State Department loyalty files of the "81 cases" that McCarthy first talked about.

Tydings indicated he had read more than half of them, and the two other Democratic members of the subcommittee, McMahon (Conn.) and Green (R. I.), are not far behind. Those with the most reading still to do are the two Republican members, Lodge (Mass.) and Hickenlooper (Iowa).

After that chore is completed, however, it would appear that the subcommittee will have gone into all of the matters raised by McCarthy, and all of the individuals against whom he has made charges.

The subcommittee may choose to delay its report, however, until President Truman names a three-man, private-citizen, special commission to examine the files, not merely of the 81 cases, but of a score or more that McCarthy has raised in addition. That commission is expected to be appointed soon.

McKellar Collapses, Leg Trouble Blamed

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), 81-year-old dean and president pro tempore of the Senate, collapsed near the Senate chamber yesterday and was taken in a wheel chair to the Capitol physician's office.

An aide said a recurring trouble in his left leg was responsible. He had presided at the opening of yesterday's session. Senator McKellar went back to his duties after receiving treatment by Capitol Physician George W. Calver.

Ex-Red Witnesses Praised

F. Joseph (Jiggs) Donohue, Washington attorney who prosecuted the Harry Bridges case as special assistant to the attorney general, declared yesterday the "real credit" for the Government's success goes to the 10 former Communists who testified.

Speakisg at a luncheon of the Advertising Club of Washington at the Hotel Statler, Donohue said that only because they dared to come forward and testify was Bridges convicted of perjury for denying he had been a Communist.

Donohue read from a letter he said he had just received from one of the witnesses, a newspaperman who lost his job when he revealed his past by testifying. The man, whom he did not name, turned down an offer by Donohue to get him a movie job, saying he wanted to find employment on his own.

Donohue said the Communist Party is a conspiratorial group dedicated to overthrowing the Government by violent means. He said the Justice Department has been doing an exceedingly effective job" in fighting communism.

Donohue was introduced by Milton S. Kronheim, whose son, now a municipal judge, was Donohue's law partner. Several judges, Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett and Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughn, the President's aide, were among the guests.

Guild Strike Closes N. Y. World-Telegram

New York, June 13 (AP). — The New York World-Telegram and Sun suspended publication today after mechanical employes refused to cross picket lines of striking CIO American Newspaper Guildsmen.

It was the first time any major New York City newspaper of general circulation had been forced to halt publication for any reason.

The big newspaper's 400 Guildsmen—editorial and business employes—struck at 4:30 a. m. (E. S. T.) in support of their demands for a 10 percent general wage increase and other contract benefits.

The strikers immediately placed picket lines around the newspaper building and three branch plants. Printers, pressmen and stereotypers refused to cross the lines and a Guild spokesman termed the walkout "completely effective."

Mutual Aid Pact

Nine major newspaper unions, including the Guild, negotiated a mutual aid pact last week in which they agreed to respect one another's picket lines.

"As long as the pressmen, the printers and the stereotypers stay out, we cannot print," said B. O. McAnney, managing editor of the paper, which normally publishes seven editions daily.

The World-Telegram and Sun, a Scripps-Howard paper, claims a circulation well in excess of 600,000 daily. The World-Telegram bought the Sun last January.

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, meanwhile, sent telegrams requesting both sides in the dispute to send representatives to the agency's offices late today. The agency named Thomas G. Dougherty, Frank L. Maher and Walter A. Maggiolo as a mediation panel.

Negotiated Three Months

The strike was called by the Guild after three months of negotiations collapsed yesterday. The Guild had announced its "rock bottom" demands as:

A 10 percent general pay increase, with minimums ranging from $40 weekly for office boys to $120 for newsmen of six years' experience; a requirement that 9 of 10 new employes hired be Guildsmen; a night differential of 1 hour's pay for each shift; arbitration of group layoffs for economy reasons; a five-day week or higher pay for tabulators, and a one-year contract.

Newspaper management rejected the demands, saying they could not be met because of business conditions. In turn, it submitted this counterproposal:

A general pay increase from $2 to $5 weekly and a raise in the top minimum to $113.50; arbitration of wage conditions when both sides fail to agree; a job security clause "in effect" the same as that at the New York Times; maintenance of membership; eight instead of six paid holidays yearly; a night differential of 75 cents for the night shift and $1.50 for the overnight shift, and a 35-hour week instead of the present 37½ hours.

The Guild claims a membership of 400 on the paper, although it says 540 employes are eligible to join. About 80 of those eligible for membership, including 40 editorial employes, reported for work as usual, the newspaper said.

After the beginning of the walkout, the New York Times discontinued printing the 200,000-250,000 copies of the struck paper it has been turning out daily on its presses.

Intimidation Effort Is Seen by Browning

Morristown, Tenn., June 13 (U.P.). Governor Gordon Browning today called a Senate committee's decision to investigate a textile strike here on-the-spot an attempt to intimidate him "on doing my duty."

"There are still States in the Union," Browning commented.

"I think the people in Washington might assume we know what our duties are under our oaths of office down here," the Governor said. "I will not be intimidated on doing my duty and I will be the judge of what is my duty when I know the facts."

Senators to Conduct Enka Strike Inquiry

A Senate Labor Subcommittee voted 4 to 2 yesterday to investigate the turbulent American Enka Corp. strike at Norristown, Tenn., to see if Gov. Gordon Browning's use of National Guard troops was justified.

Senators Robert A. Taft (R., O.) and Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.) fought the move.

Subcommittee Chairman James E. Murray (D., Mont.) said the Democratic majority agreed to hold hearings at Morristown on Thursday.

"It seems to me very serious to have the militia called into a strike which apparently hasn't developed into any serious violence," he said. He emphasized the hearings would be "an investigation, not a trial."

Taft said he saw "no special feature" about the walkout of CIO Textile Workers Union members. "It's an ordinary case of a strike," he added.

He thought the inquiry was "more likely to stir up trouble than to get peace," and that the Governor was qualified to deal with any unjustified violence.

Donnell said it was the Governor's function to decide when the National Guard should be called.

CBS Cancels 2 More Television Programs

New York, June 13 (AP).—The Columbia Broadcasting System canceled two of its television shows tonight because of a technicians' strike.

The network said the "Suspense" show and wrestling matches would not be televised because they required production skill that pinch-hitting technicians don't have.

Six television shows were canceled last night after the walkout began. Four were minor unsponsored programs, CBS said.

The union, the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, claims it has halted 40 percent of CBS's television production.

Charles Miller Is Dead; Former Bar Official

Court Rulings At Odds in Lustron Sale

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Federal District judges in Chicago and Columbus, Ohio, today issued conflicting orders for disposition of the forthy million dollar Lustron prefab housing firm.

Judge Philip L. Sullivan in Chicago ordered the Columbus firm into involuntary bankruptcy and named three receivers.

Almost simultaneously, in Columbus, Judge Mell G. Underwood confirmed a liquidation plan presented by his receiver, Clyde Foracker, for sale of the firms assets to the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and the Lafayette Steel Co., Detroit.

The situation left doubt as to the status of the firm. This apparently may be cleared up by further action of either District Court, but could conceivably delay further receivership action until a review of both orders by a United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Physical assets of the Lustron firm are in Columbus, but it is an Illinois corporation.

Attorneys in Chicago said that usually a bankruptcy case such as that in which Judge Sullivan acted takes precedence over an equity receivership such as the Columbus case.

Judge Uuderwood confirmed an order to sell Lustron Corporation to RFC for six million dollars and inventory materials to the Detroit firm for $645,000 despite a temporary restraining order issued Thursday by the Chicago judge.

Attorney Joseph H. Schwartz, representing that housing firm, said "The District Court at Chicago plainly has superseding jurisdiction."

Attorney Michael Gesas, who represented three creditors petitioning in Chicago, told Judge Sullivan today that if the Columbus court's sale were permitted, the RFC would be placed in the position of a preferred creditor to the detriment of other creditors.

Attorney Frank Harrison of the RFC told Judge Sullivan that the RFC represents 99 percent of the Lustron creditors, and the firm was losing $35,000 a day—nearly all of it RFC funds.

Action Asked In RFC Loan Fraud Charge

By the United Press

Senate investigators asked yesterday for Justice Department action on charges of fraud in two RFC loans to small companies.

The firms are the Ribbonwriter Corp. of America, Dania, Fla., and the Novelty Plant and Pottery Co., Eastland, Tex., both of which went broke.

Chairman J. William Fulbright (D., Ark.) of a Senate Banking subcommittee investigating RFC loans said the charges "ought to be proved or disproved." He said "very serious allegations" has been made that a $300,000 loan to the Florida company went into the pockets of company officials. The company went bankrupt July 29, 1949, four months after getting the loan.

RFC Director William E. Willett said the agency will investigate and report to the Justice Department.

Fulbright revealed the FBI already is checking the possibility of fraud in an apparaisal made of assets of the Eastland firm. The company got a $48,000 loan after C. V. Fletcher, an independent appraiser, valued its assets at $98,037. When the company went broke, a second appraiser valued the property at $4,514.

Fulbright said this "great discrepancy" offers "some ground to believe there was fraud or some impropriety approaching fraud."

ARMOUR AND COMPANY should know!

Giant FOOD DEPARTMENT STORES

. . . and here's what one of its "top" officials recently said:

"Your specifications for GIANT Top Notch Beef are most rigid"

During the more than four generations ARMOUR AND COMPANY has been in business, it has established itself as being one of the country's leading suppliers of fine beef and other superior meat products. Its experience, judgment, and opinion are accepted everywhere as being the best in the business.

ARMOUR is the major source of supply for the "Top-Notch" beef offered in GIANT'S 20 stores serving the food needs of thousands of families in the Nation's Capital.

A recent letter written by a leading ARMOUR executive, commenting on the standards GIANT sets for its "Top-Notch" beef, stated the rigidity of these specifications. It pointed out that the best beef comes from the corn belt — that ARMOUR selects GIANT "Top-Notch" beef in its Omaha and Sioux City plants (deep in the heart of the corn country) — and that, even then, of the combined production at all ARMOUR plants—other Senate committee, Shenker was his attorney.

Crime Witness Tells Of Aid to Party

These were highlights of Molasky's testimony:

He owns 35 percent of the stock of Pioneer News Service, Inc., a firm that paid $40,000 in dividends last year on a business of $207,000 and despite the fact that net profits were some $22,000. Molasky's salary until recent weeks has been $26,600, or $550 a week. Kefauver said that "about the only thing he does is countersign the checks."

Pioneer, Molasky finally admitted after lengthy questioning, does have a bookie or two as a customer. But, said Kefauver, Molasky was "very vague" beyond that. The Senator said the committee will summon other witnesses, examine the books turned over to it by Molasky and find out the facts in due course.

Part of Molasky's stock in Pioneer came from the late Moses L. (Moe) Annenberg, one-time boss of the Nation-wide race wire business. Moe gave him the stock for $1. The present national wire, Continental Press, serves Pioneer. Molasky said Pioneer pays $540 a week for this service and had paid up to $1200 in previous periods when business was better. He was not specific about deterioration in business conditions.

Molasky himself publishes a scratch sheet for racing fans in St. Louis and pays Pioneer $75 a week for its service to the sheet.

Molasky, as had been brought out recently, is the owner, with his wife and children, of 18,050 shares of Western Union stock worth about half a million dollars. It is the only stock he owns, outside of Pioneer.

Molasky said he never has had any part in the management of Western Union, the firm that leases wires to Continental.

He did say, however, that the local Western Union manager had come around to get his proxy for the firm's annual meeting. The Molasky block of stock is about the fifteenth largest and is No. 1 among those owned by individuals. The others are owned by various trusts, according to public records.

In a mimeographed statement, Molasky said "there are no gangsters, mobsters, racketeers or other persons of questionable character connected with, interested in, or employed by Pioneer News."

Missouri's Attorney General J. E. Taylor some time ago told the Senate Commerce Committee that such race news distributors as Pioneer are controlled by a syndicate which he said was guided by a "vicious criminal element."

Price Put on Gaming Chiefs

Tallahassee, Fla., June 13 (U.P.)—Gov. Fuller Warren announced the opening of the $1000 Florida crime sweepstakes today.

Warren set up the $1000 stakes out of his special fund for the first three Floridians who swear out gambling warrants that are prosecuted successfully in the courts.

First prize of $500 will go to the person who gets in the first warrant that brings a felony conviction. Second and third prizes are $300 and $200. Anyone finishing out of the money will receive "special citations for good government."

Bringing a bookmaker into court won't count in the sweepstakes. Attorney General Richard Ervin said the contest demanded a felony conviction—meaning that the person caught must be the operator of a lottery or gambling place. It's only a misdemeanor to make book, shoot craps or play roulette, he said.

Warren pointed out that under the law it is a crime to witness a felony without trying to stop it.

Doctor Denies Doing Illegal Operation

Dr. William A. Goodloe denied on the witness stand at District Court yesterday that he ever performed an illegal operation on Miss Gloria M. Huffman, of Baltimore.

He also declared that he never offered a bribe or in any other way attempted to influence Miss Huffman not to be a witness against him in the case.

The 53-year-old physician who has offices at 1836 S st. nw., where it is charged the operation was performed last March, was on the witness stand for almost the entire session, and will continue testifying today. The case should reach the six-man, six-woman jury either late this afternoon or Thursday.

Dr. Goodloe repeatedly asserted that he treated Miss Huffman only for hemmorhagia, a severe and persistent bleeding.

He said that from the history of her case she related as well as from his physical examination of her, he did not believe that Miss Huffman was pregnant at the time she came to him for treatment.

Miss Huffman was interviewed by police in April when she went to Gallinger Hospital when the bleeding persisted. At the time, she accused Dr. Goodloe and on the witness stand has repeated the charge that the physician performed the operation for $350.

Defense Attorney Charles E. Ford said he will present another physician today to support Dr. Goodloe's contention that the symptoms Miss Huffman showed did not call for the conclusion that she was pregnant.

As to a charge of attempted obstruction of justice, Dr. Goodloe said that he never approached Miss Huffman but admitted knowing Miss Alice L. Galusha who is also charged with the offense.

He described Miss Galusha as a friend of his wife. He said that when Miss Galusha learned he was accused of the abortion, she was shocked and on her own accord decided to go to Baltimore to "put some sense in Miss Huffman's head."

The Government contends that with Dr. Goodloe's aid, Miss Galusha went to Miss Huffman and offered her a trip to California where she could not be "contacted."

Stone Age rDawings Found Near Black Sea

London June 13—UP—The Moscow radio today said Soviet Archaeoligists have discovered more than 500 rock drawings of the late Stone Age or the early Bronze Age at Kobystan, 40 miles from Baku on the Black Sea.

Many of the drawings are of men hunting wild beasts, including species now extinct, Moscow said. Silhouette drawings hallowed out of rocks by stone implements also were found, Moscow said.

Inland Steel Rejects Lobby Probers' Quiz

Chicago, June 13 (AP).—Clarence B. Randall, president of the Inland Steel Co., today refused to supply information asked by a congressional committee.

Randall termed "inquisitorial" a letter from Representative Buchanan (D., Pa.) asking for what he said was detailed information on company activities dealing with public issues.

Buchanan, as chairman of the House Select Committee on Lobbying Activities, had requested Inland, along with 166 large corporations, to detail expenditures over a 3½-year period. He said information sought by Buchanan included travel expense, subscriptions, contributions, and advertising "dealing with public issues which might be the subject of Federal legislative action."

In a letter to Buchanan, Randall declared:

"By your inquisitorial letter, you have demanded of the Inland Steel Co. a great deal of information to which you are not entitled in a free America."

Randall's letter concluded that "unless our present doubts as to your authority to ask these questions are satisfactorily cleared, we shall make no further answer to your questionnaire."

In Washington, Buchanan said: "I shall interpret Inland Steel's reluctance to give an accounting as a reason for suspicion and so report to the committee."

Buchanan said 39 of the 166 business firms receiving questionnaires are registered under the Lobbying Act or have made contributions to organizations engaged in lobbying, directly or indirectly, Buchanan said.

"We have a right to know the facts," he added. "Propagandizing under false colors is not in keeping with the American system."

Senate Unit to Consider Hutchinson Nomination

A Senate committee today will consider President Truman's nomination of Martin A. Hutchinson of Virginia to the Federal Trade Commission.

Quick Senate confirmation is expected if no opposition develops.

But, should Mr. Truman's choice of the Richmond attorney and political foe of Senator Byrd (D., Va.), run into a controversy, Senate action likely will be delayed.

Byrd has not said what stand he will take when the nomination comes up before the Commerce Committee.

Milk Emergency

Disputants in the milk strike have agreed to what should have been done in the first place in establishing emergency deliveries in the Washington area. The strike has not yet become a life-or-death affair, but it has caused a great deal of unnecessary scrambling and worry, thanks to the fact that the District government was totally unprepared for it. Under the new plan, modeled on that in effect in Pittsburgh, deliveries will be made to homes where there are young children or invalids who require milk in their diet, after a doctor's certificate has been obtained. This is good so far as it goes, but the deliveries themselves are likely to be cumbersome and the procedure in obtaining certificates may prove a considerable burden. Officials may wish to consider the establishment of neighborhood distribution stations where families may purchase milk merely on affidavits.

As for the strike itself, the refusal by the dairies of the union offer to reopen six of the nine closed plants on the surface looks high-handed. There is a good deal of justification for this stand, however, in that the union in the past has forced a contract with the industry as a whole. Rather than be picked off individually, managements have banded together on the theory that a strike against one is a strike against all. The trouble here, of course, is that the consumer is squeezed at both ends—if there is any strike, then everything is shut down. It will be interesting to see whether the union can have its cake and eat it, too, in the lockout charges it has filed against the dairies. In any event, these will take a long time to test, and meanwhile the public holds the bag.

When Flag Outruns Law

In the large batch of opinions handed down by the Supreme Court on the last day of its term last week was an interesting six-to-three decision that the Constitution does not necessarily follow American troops in an invasion of foreign soil. Enemy aliens punished for war crimes in countries occupied by American troops cannot reach into the courts here and secure writs of habeas corpus to test the legality of what the military does. In the past the Supreme Court has gone a long way in protecting the civil rights of aliens in the United States, but it draws the line against enemy aliens who have never been in this country. We suspect that the distinction will appeal to most citizens as conforming to common sense as well as to the Constitution.

The 21 German nationals who sought a writ of habeas corpus from the District Court of the District of Columbia had been in the service of the German armed forces in China. They were convicted before an American military commission of violating the laws of war by giving the Japanese information about the movements of American armed forces after the surrender of Germany and before the surrender of Japan. The Court of Appeals here had concluded that the prisoners were invested with the right of personal freedom by the Constitution and therefore must have the right to the remedial writ. Its reasoning rested heavily upon the language of the Fifth Amendment which guarantees "any person" the right to life, liberty and property. But "any person" could scarcely mean any person in a foreign theater of war in which American troops are operating. The court recognized the duty of the Government to protect the rights of American citizens wherever they may be. But it found that constitutional safeguards are available to aliens only when they are within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

In the Yamashita case the court refused to receive a petition for habeas corpus even though the offenses had been committed within our territory and the trial had taken place within the jurisdiction of our insular courts. The present defendants, tried in China and imprisoned in Germany, are still further removed from the reach of American courts. Justice Jackson pointed out in the majority opinion, moreover, that our own citizens conscripted into the Army are subject to military trials for offenses against Americans or aliens, without recourse to Fifth Amendment rights. "It would be a paradox, indeed," he said, "if what the amendment denied to Americans is guaranteed to enemies."

The dissenters, Justices Black, Douglas and Burton, did not suggest that every provision of the Bill of Rights should become controlling in countries occupied by American troops. They contended only that habeas corpus should be available to the German prisoners for determining whether the military tribunal which tried them was legally constituted and whether it had jurisdiction to impose punishment for the conduct charged. Undoubtedly it is desirable to establish a policy of "equal justice under law" wherever American authorities are in control. But it does not seem to us that this requires opening our domestic courts to enemy aliens who have never lived under our laws and are never likely to do so. On practical as well as legal grounds the Supreme Court has made a strong case for restricting the scope of American law to the areas where it can reasonably be enforced, excepting, of course, those cases in which the Government reaches out to protect American citizens in other lands.

The British "No"

Britain's Labor Party seems to have slammed the door on any hope that the crystallization of the Schuman Plan would find the British government ready to join the combine. The party's executive committee rejects the plan out of fear of a supergovernment. It would be rash, nevertheless, to jump to the conclusion that the decision is final with Britain. The Schuman Plan has excited a lively interest across party lines there. All the Liberals are for it, and, though they have only 9 seats, they still have a following which gave them 2,500,000 votes at the last election. Favorable, too, is a sizable segment of the Conservative Party. Even the Laborites are (or were) divided, for, in spite of the xenophobic Mr. Bevin, Premier Attlee was quick to accept the principle, and he probably voiced the view of some of the rank-and-file. Doubtless, however, the party in Parliament will close ranks behind its executive committee. In that event the Schuman Plan may present the parties in Britain with an issue at a time when to all intents and purposes issues have been set aside in a kind of informal understanding giving all the appearance of a coalition. Such a development would be highly significant in view of the slender Labor majority.

It is clear from this decision that the Labor Party is under the dominance of economic planners who are simply applying the logic of their position. Planners don't like to share control. They are the boss of society. With rigid powers over the home market, allocating raw materials, factory space, machines, labor, and investment, they must keep up barriers between themselves and the outside world lest "chaos" (meaning freedom of choice) be introduced into the domestic system. Thus imports from abroad and currency relations with abroad have to be controlled. To be sure, the Labor Party says the plan might be considered favorably if all the European countries were Socialist. But this is plainly an excuse for nonparticipation. The game was given away at a recent conference of the Socialist parties in Europe at Copenhagen. At that meeting the British Labor Party alone maintained that the proposed steel and coal authority should be intergovernmental, so that its decisions would in fact be the subject of dickering among delegates and not made in its own name. What would that mean? Clearly a Europe committed to a jealous group of rival planners all determined that, whatever else happened, their own populations would be fully employed. Under such auspices Europe would be foredoomed to chaos.

Mr. Schuman's concept is dramatically opposed to British Labor's. What he envisages is a board that is supranational, not international. It would make such decisions as what plants to improve and what plants to shut down for keeping abreast of an expanding market. The test would be the most economical use of resources, so as to bring down prices and sell the product in Europe and abroad. But the subsidiary decisions of buying and selling would be made by the market—something that planners cannot tolerate. This is the economics side of the Schuman proposal. It is, however, the politics of the proposal that is the main and exhilarating element in it. Mr. Schuman decided that oratory has had its chance of bringing unity to Europe and has failed and that the time had come for action—and action at the point of crucial contact. He finds that the Laborites in England have never bothered to grapple with the unity problem, or to take it seriously. They forget that both the French and the Germans have provided for the partial abandonment of sovereignty in their constitutions, and that the Schuman Plan thus amounts to implementation.

Mr. Schuman has brought the divergences in Europe to a head; he has presented the British with a choice. The Labor Party has made its own answer—and this is that unity is merely an ideal to which to give lip service, not one to be realized. It wants room to pursue its own autarchic policies, which, in the final analysis, mean an effort to get prosperity at somebody else's expense. With this decision the Labor Party will stand convicted of trying to re-create the world of Dr. Schacht which brought on the last war. The question remains to be answered whether the British people will agree with the Labor Party. Now more than ever Mr. Schuman's hand needs to be upheld by the United States, lest the French, with Britain out of the combination, yield to fear of German predominance, and back away from pursuit of an initiative which is the only statesmanlike action to come out of Europe since the war ended.

Good Old Days

Just as many of us in our midcentury anxiety and uncertainty were having a wonderful time sighing for the good old solid year of 1900 along have come the debunkers to spoil our reveries. Armed with statistics, Paul G. Hoffman, head of ECA, recently showed Columbia University graduates how much better life is today than in 1900 in terms of income, living standards, motor cars, leisure, health, education, social justice, even opportunity for youth. And novelist Clyde Brion Davis, who, the story goes, got hopping mad at reading a highbrow lament over the "decline" of culture in the last half century, has written a book to prove how much better it is to live now than in the time of McKinley. In The Age of Indiscretion he has pictured his home town of Chillicothe, Mo., in 1900 as compared to the present, giving today's town all the better of it, even in such intangibles as religion, family life, sex attitudes and social manners.

Yet a lot of Americans, besides rock-ribbed politicos, will hold on to their nostalgia for 1900. For that was a magic year of childhood to a big proportion of them. Yet there were similarities. The Big Bear, then as now, viz, Russia, and the Russian menace in China, was threatening to close the door of equal opportunity. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge had warned the previous year that if Russia succeeded in closing in on the Chinese Empire,

> . . . we shall not only be excluded from their markets, but we shall stand face to face with a power controlling an extent of territory and a mass of population the like of which the world has never seen. In the presence of such a colossus of despotism and military socialism, the welfare of every free people is at stake.

However, that was only an esoteric preoccupation in behalf of our merchants who were constantly wondering when the Chinaman would add an inch to his shirttail for the sake of our cotton mills. No one worried much about it, for wide oceans still stretched on both sides of America.

Fetish Of Freedom

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., president of Georgetown University, delivered a most challenging commencement address on Monday. He must have anticipated, therefore, that it would be challenged, although the challenging of authority—which in Father Guthrie's lexicon appears to be synonymous with truth—is what he calls "the sacred fetish of academic freedom." This fetish, he says, "is the soft under-belly of our American way of life, and the sooner it is armor-plated by some sensible limitation the sooner will the future of this Nation be secured from fatal consequences."

One can scarcely take exception to this, save, perhaps, to ask what constitutes a sensible limitation. "The true and the good," says Father Guthrie, "are the natural limitations of freedom. This is not an area for opinion because opinion does not delineate, for by its very nature it packages the false with the true. Nor is this a matter for experimentation because the prudent man does not experiment with suicide."

All that remains, then, is to determine what is the true and the good. Father Guthrie must be aware that there are honest, if mistaken, differences of opinion in this area. History suggests that these differences cannot be resolved by dogma. It is now widely acknowledged that the earth revolves about the sun, although in 1616 the ideas of Copernicus were denounced as dangerous to faith, and Galileo, summoned to Rome and tried by the Inquisition for teaching these ideas, was forced to abjure them. The theory of genetics preached recently in Moscow by Trofim Lysenko may have merit; but something more than the establishment of it as the true and the good by the Politburo will be necessary before it can win the acceptance of free minds.

Father Guthrie speaks of the true tradition of academic freedom as "a tradition that freedom springs from truth, but that truth is rarely freedom's offspring." We do not see how truth can be sired except by freedom—that is, by the tolerance of diversity and even of error. And we should think that an institution of learning—which is to say an institution of inquiry and challenge—can do no better than to adhere to the ideal set forth by Thomas Jefferson when he first invited scholars to join the faculty of the University of Virginia: "This institution will be based on the illimitable freedom of the human mind. For here, we are not afraid to follow truth wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate error so long as reason is left free to combat it."

Graduation For Hawaii

It is fitting that on the fiftieth anniversary of the formal organization of the Territory of Hawaii, the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee should be putting the finishing touches on the bill to enable Hawaii to graduate to full Statehood. All indications are that the committee will report out favorably the bill which already has twice passed the House. Whether it receives a place on the calendar then will depend on how vigorously it is pushed by the Senate leadership. In view of the tremendous amount of work that has preceded the various hearings on the bill, we think it ought to be considered a "must" obligation and put to a vote.

It is scarcely necessary to reiterate that Hawaii qualifies on every point—loyalty, education, population, fiscal responsibility, even the extraordinary participation by her electorate in voting. Never has Statehood been so close. All that can be asked is that the Senate as a whole be given a chance to consider on their merits the Hawaiian Statehood bill and the companion piece for Alaska. June 14, which is also Flag Day, is an appropriate time to give some thought to the importance of these two outposts of Old Glory.

FOR STEPHEN VINCENT BENET

When first I found you, all the stars
Seemed suddenly wild, willful things
Mad, splendid steeds with fiery wings.
(You never guessed how we, together, Rode through the blue and windy weather . . .)
Your touch dissolved those iron bars
Between me and the joyous height
That gods may travel through the night.
(You never knew how we would go Together through the dancing snow . . .)
Because of you, each hill became
A kindled thing of magic flame.
Tonight, I face a calm, blue hill . . .
Tonight, the stars are very still . . .

College Set Surplus

By Malvina Lindsay

Dwindling Prestige

THE BIGGEST tide of young college graduates in the country's history will shortly begin to flow into offices, stores, the management end of factories. Some see in this a warning of a tidal wave of degree holders a decade hence. Where, it is asked, will places be found for them?

Since 1932 the number of students in colleges and universities has doubled. The great American yen to go to college has been finding outlet despite the rising cost of college life. This academic year saw two and a half million enrolled in colleges and universities. Some predictions place enrollment at three million in less than 10 years hence.

While the cry is raised on one side that not enough bright boys and girls have the chance to go to college, the counter alarm is sounded that the country is overproducing degree holders who won't be able to find the kind of jobs they expect.

AS MORE and more college graduates are turned out each June there is a "whittling down of the material advantages of being educated," points out Prof. Seymour E. Harris of Harvard University. He predicts the time may come when the college graduate may earn less than the non-college worker. For if ultimately one third of the adult population consists of college graduates and one half of junior college graduates there is bound to be an "occupational downgrading" says Professor Harris. There also may arise the problem of a "frustrated intelligentsia"—as there did in Europe.

Back of this reasoning is the unfortunate fact that a college education stands for the wrong things generally in the American mind. It is supposed chiefly to guarantee well-paid white collar jobs and social prestige.

The 84 percent of American parents who would like to see their sons go to college, and the 69 percent who aspire to such advantages for their daughters, are dreaming in terms of, "I want my child to have things easier than I had them." This attitude is responsible for what has been called the great American mass inferiority complex. "I didn't get to go to college."

One value of the great influx of young Americans to campuses may be a lessening of that sense of inferiority and its often attendant anti-intellectualism, which is now such an aid to the political rabble rouser.

BUT WHICH is the greater threat—a surplus of the formally educated, or the waste of human resources caused by millions of bright boys and girls being denied college training?

There really isn't much of a choice because human beings, at least in a country like this, are going to push on steadily to what they consider bigger and better things. And the positive approach to the problem says: Let's take the chance. Let's give young America all the education it will take. Think of how much talent, even genius may be thus encouraged! Think of what this might do in opening new fields of productivity, enlarging job opportunities for everyone!

Proponents of the Federal scholarship program point out that there's already a shortage in many fields of science, and in such professions as teaching, nursing, medicine, social work, psychiatry, that will exist for years to come.

There does remain the danger of the frustrated intellectual. To erase the general concept of a college degree as a meal ticket and a social passport will take years. But many colleges are working on this through their emphasis on preparation for living and for citizenship and for development of well-rounded, self-reliant personalities. Also more careful admissions will help to keep off of campuses the youth who is not college material and who if graduated is often the potential regimented man who does not think for himself and expresses his discontent by following so-called "strong" leaders.

"Marginal Sea"

In its editorial "Marginal Sea," on June 8, The Washington Post notes that the claims of Texas for lands lying under the marginal sea are not of the same order as the claims of California and of Louisiana for lands similarly situated. It correctly states that Texas "entered the Union by an agreement which provided, among other things, that Texas should 'retain all vacant and unappropriated lands lying within its limits.'"

It would have added much to that editorial to give the additional information that those limits, as established by Texas in 1836, were in part as follows: "Beginning at the mouth of the Sabine River and running west along the Gulf of Mexico three league from land to the mouth of the Rio Grande . . ." These limits were tacitly accepted by the countries which recognized the sovereignty of the Republic of Texas. Among those countries was the United States of America, which gave formal recognition to the 3-league (not 3-mile) limit when, in 1848, in the treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, the boundary between this country and Mexico was defined as commencing in the Gulf of Mexico, 3 leagues from land, opposite the mouth of the Rio Grande.

Did not the Supreme Court, in its interpretation and use of the "equal footing clause" overlook the fact that Texas does have an element of sovereignty possessed by no other State? That the General Land Office of Texas is an important bureau of the State government, administering the public domain which Texas retained when it entered the Union?

No other State, but only the Federal Government, has a comparable bureau or control of a vast public domain. The thought may appear fantastic, but under Mr. Justice Douglas' interpretation of the "equal footing clause," could not the Federal Government lay claim to the General Land Office of Texas and the public domain which it administers? And if that claim is made good, who would then own the State Capitol in Austin, which was paid for with some three million acres of that public domain? Fantastic? No more so than the court decision which inspired these questions!

Arlington School Costs

On June 6 there appeared in The Washington Post a letter to the editor entitled "Arlington School Costs." The letter attempted to justify the high cost of school construction in Arlington County, and to support the high-cost program.

Just to help keep the record straight for other people who may have read that letter, it is pointed out that a great many people who belong to organizations such as that of the writer of the above letter, who are continuing the propaganda for these high-cost schools and other expenditures by way of bond issues, do not themselves pay any taxes in Arlington county, of any kind.

It seems to me that it is entirely wrong that these people who come to live temporarily in Arlington County, and who claim tax exemption under an Act of Congress, should use their influence to place a tremendous debt on the people of Arlington County, knowing that when they leave the county they will leave this debt for the residents to pay.

Of the 5000 people who voted in Arlington County in 1948 for that bond issue, not less than 50 percent are no longer residents of this county.

It would seem to me that the just thing to do, in the case of military personnel who claim to be assigned here by reason of military orders and who pay no taxes, would be for Congress either to remove the exemption or give Arlington County a subsidy based on the number of pupils for which the county must thus carry the educational load.

If Congress does not do anything about it, the State of Virginia is going to be forced to do something. What the State of Virginia will have to do will be to put a tuition fee on the children of military personnel who claim to reside in the State solely on account of their military duties and who have children in school, but who claim tax exemption, leaving the residents the burden of educating their children free of cost. I see no equity in that.

I trust that you will publish this letter. I note that The Post has been willing at all times to publish anything that has been submitted by the advocates of the school bond issues.

Treasurer of Arlington County, Va.

Juvenile Court

I am glad to see you giving so much space to our Juvenile Court. It needs it. So far it seems that the scores are about even.

With the help of The Washington Post we may be able to prove that the real and immediate need is for an "in between" home and school—a place where "problem parents" can send their children, a place where the children themselves are given a chance to show us which way they want to go. J. B. P.

Women Nominees

As an advocate of bipartisan policies in Congress, especially on foreign relations, and as a mutual check for the two political parties, may the writer add his voice to the consortium of praises bestowed on broad-minded Senator Margaret Chase Smith for her brave "Declaration of Conscience" address. Also, as an advocate of equal rights (or as nearly as equal as possible) for women citizens, the writer suggests to the respective national political committees, that they nominate Senator Smith for the Vice Presidency on the Republican ticket and Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas for the Vice Presidency on the Democratic ticket.

It may not be amiss to remind the said committee that there are more women than men voters. Both parties have some real liberals in their ranks, but just as the Democratic Party will have to concede that management should have equal rights with the workingman, so will the Republican Party have to change its "special privilege" obsession to a "no privileges" trend.

Meeting With Stalin

I note in recent news stories that there is talk of the possibility of another meeting of Truman and Stalin. I hope it does not take place, especially in view of the last meeting—at Potsdam.

Everytime that there has been such a meeting Stalin has made fools of our representatives.

No nation is ever a friend of any other nation to the point of willingly sacrificing its interests, of a permanent or substantial character. Anybody who deals with another nation on any other basis is very apt to wind up as we have now; so I hope that we will not again put ourselves in a position to be made a fool of by the Reds.

Reactions To The Milk Strike

Why is it that in every case of economic dispute, Mr. Average Citizen is always pinched between the disputants?

Periodically a certain labor leader calls a strike of coal miners. For weeks, or month, Mr. Average Citizen's family—infant, ill, or aged—must shiver for lack of coal.

Transit operators and employes differ. Result: employes' pay is raised, but transit operators enjoy increased income, because Mr. Average Citizen must pay higher fares and suffer poorer service.

The milkman has an argument with the dairy owner and decides not to deliver the milk to Mr. Average Citizen. Mr. A. C.'s baby cries for the milk that he can't get. Mr. A. C. himself, or his wife, may need the milk for health, but he can't get it

This phenomenon is all too frequent. Mr. Average Citizen is continually, innocently and unwittingly being caught in the middle whenever those two fellows, management and labor, become embroiled between themselves.

Members of the Congress, will you do something about this very real and very serious menace to our economic well-being?

W. JAMES BASTIAN.
District Heights, Md.

Society has indeed disgracefully degenerated when it fails to protect its own children, when it allows infants and their helpless, anguished parents to become the victims of a ruthless, totally unwarranted conflict such as this "milk strike."

Naturally, no one is willing to accept the blame or even responsibility for the underlying cause of these viciously unprincipled goings-on, but the fact remains that this insufferable strike, with all its possibilities, was permitted to be carried out. The only thing that keeps such evil from being rightly called a crime is the deplorable fact that as yet our dallying, leisure-paced legislators have failed to enact the proper restraining laws. We have laws that seek to prevent outright murder, but not indirect murder. A not too exaggerated comparison is that of a doctor haggling for a higher fee while the patient is under his knife on the operating table.

MRS. RUTH DODSON.
Falls Church, Va.

I do not profess to understand the workings of the unions beyond a layman's general idea, but it is incomprehensible to me how they could have allowed this thing to happen. I do not have milk delivered for myself; it is in behalf of my children, aged 4½ years and 10 months, that I make this vigorous protest.

Rumors of this strike reached me last week and I promptly called my dairy to ask about it. their reply was, "We have heard nothing about it."

Why, oh why, must we be belabored with these strikes? There must be another way! How can we expect our statesmen to create world-wide peace when we can't even live in harmony in one city?

Compulsory Voting

On business now in Europe, I have just witnessed a national election in Belgium which offers the United States a very valuable lesson. Out of about 8,500,000 people no less than 4,942,807 citizens went to the polls to express their pleasure as to the return of the King.

If a similar percentage of our eligible voters had done their duty in 1948, about 90,000,000 people would have been at the polls. Instead of that more than 50 percent were slackers. More than 50 percent of our free citizens failed to do their most sacred duty—to vote.

Our legislators have seen to it that our people pay taxes. Apparently that is to them a more sacred duty than to vote. If that were not their feeling, they would have enacted a compulsory voting law long ago.

Tens of millions of people now under the yoke of the ruthless Communists would be willing to lay their lives down to regain their freedoms stolen from them by zealous minorities. With a mere 240,000 followers, according to his own admission, Lenin took over the government of about 165,000,000 in 1917. If this is not to happen to us, a return to the cracker barrel days is long overdue, and a compulsory voting law, with ample teeth in it, would help bring that about.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

Stalin's Achilles Heel

AFTER A long expedition of inquiry abroad, this reporter is convinced that three factors are powerfully working to prevent a third world war from breaking out now or in the near future.

The first factor is the incompleteness of the Kremlin's war preparations. The second is the continuing vulnerability of the Soviet vital centers to the West's superior weight of atomic weapons. These are the temporary obstacles to war, which will be largely or wholly removed when Soviet rearmament reaches its climax in 1953-54.

The enduring obstacle, which will always prevent war if the West is reasonably strong, is simply an inner weakness of the Soviet system. Perhaps the best way to present the facts about this weakness is simply to describe the occasion, last March, on which this reporter glimpsed Stalin's Achilles heel, through the eyes of another man.

The place was the house of an American in one of the less dreadful German cities. The speaker was an intelligent, civilized, youngish German of Junker stock, who had served successively in the prewar German Embassy in Moscow; as a fighting soldier on the Russian front, and as a member of the inner group of the German general staff.

His talk had a tincture of cosmic comedy, because he was so much possessed by two conflicting rages. He was enraged because Hitler had not been murdered, although he personally had been involved in a whole series of assassination plots, including the great plot of July 20. And he was even more enraged that Germany had not won the war, because Hitler in his folly had refused to use the Russians to beat the Russians.

ONE OF ALL Hitler's wartime errors, it is now almost certain that history will choose this as the greatest. The plain, documented truth is that at the beginning of the German invasion of the Soviet Union, the vast slave population at the base of the Russian system showed every sign of active disloyalty and incipient revolt. Yet Hitler threw away this incalculable advantage, in order to indulge his own racist whims.

To be brief, when the German invasion began, the Nazi divisions were greeted with bread and salt the traditional symbols of welcome—in almost every Russian village along the whole front. Among the organized Russian forces, mass surrenders were then common. Most remarkable of all, both the surrendering Russian soldiers and the men of the villages and towns being overrun actually volunteered in great numbers to fight with the Germans against their own people.

At the end of three months, sufficient volunteers to form a considerable number of purely Russian divisions under German officers had been collected and were in training. What is more, the average German division in combat on the Russian front was by then composed of 15 percent of Russians. These Russians in German divisions were first brought into the companies and platoons as hewers of wood and drawers of water, but later used as combat soldiers in German uniform by the divisional commanders. They saved the German armies, that first winter.

YET IT WAS at this point that Hitler and Himmler intervened. They proclaimed that the Russians were to be treated as an "inferior race." They forbade Russians being admitted to "war comradeship." They ordered the famous scorched earth policy.

The scorched earth policy instantly revolutionized the attitude of the Russian masses and gave birth to the partisan movement. The divisional commanders with difficulty retained the Russian soldiers already incorporated into their units, but could take in no more. Only three of the purely Russian divisions under German officers were saved from the wreck, because Col. Count von Stauffenberg hastily sent word to the training camps to have the men write themselves down as "Cossacks," whose racial equality Himmler had oddly admitted.

Even so, the Russians in the German divisions fought through to the end of the war. The three so-called Cossack divisions were among the most efficient and most savage in the German army. Even much later, when Hitler and Himmler changed their strange policy on the urging of the general staff, the Russian General Vlasov was able to secure more than a million recruits for his "army" from among Russians in German hands.

"By then," said the embittered German staff officer, "it was no good any more. There were not enough arms."

THE LESSON of these extraordinary facts, which are fully authenticated and form one of the major dossiers of the American policy-makers, is very simple indeed. Given the right conditions, the penetration of the closed Soviet system by bodies of foreign troops can become the occasion of a sort of instinctive rising of the enslaved masses. If this is true in Russia, moreover, as the foregoing facts indicate, it is 20 times more true in the satellite area. Anywhere in the satellites, the appearance of a foreign corporal's guard across the border would provoke a great Spartacist rebellion.

This inner Soviet weakness does not mean that complacency and inaction are now justified. On the contrary, if the West remains a military vacuum while Soviet power rapidly grows, the masters of the Kremlin will begin to know that not even a corporal's guard of Western troops can ever cross the borders of their empire. When and if that day comes, the danger of the West will be fearful indeed.

On the other hand, this inner Soviet weakness certainly does mean that we can now begin the defense job in earnest, with no risk of immediate Russian aggression. And it also means that forces the West can reasonably mobilize will be sufficient to deter Russian aggression in the future. If we make ourselves strong, there is no need for fear.

Lobby Investigation

By Marquis Childs

Possible Contempt On The Right

SOONER or later it was bound to happen. Organizations of the reactionary right have come up against the same kind of treatment meted out for a considerable time by Congress to organizations of the extreme left.

The Committee for Constitutional Government faces possible contempt action by a House committee investigating lobbyists and their sources of revenue. Dr. Edward A. Rumely, executive secretary of the committee, has refused to produce records showing who paid the costs to send out vast quantities of propaganda including John T. Flynn's book, The Road Ahead.

This case would seem to parallel closely that of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, which is on the Attorney General's list of subversive organizations. That committee refused to produce its records showing how it was financed. Eleven committee members were sentenced to from three to six months in jail. Having finally exhausted all legal appeals, they are about to serve their sentences, thus ending nearly four years of dispute.

The Committee for Constitutional Government is just now at the beginning of what may prove to be a similar development. Rumely has refused once to produce the records sought by the Lobby Committee.

But the committee plans a second and carefully prepared hearing at which he again will be called upon to produce the private records of his organization. The purpose is to make plain, if he refuses, why a citation for contempt is inevitable. Rumely, in other words, will be put publicly in the position of defying a duly constituted committee of Congress.

THE LOBBY Committee, headed by Representative Frank Buchanan of Pennsylvania, has ambitious plans that go beyond this. Members of the staff believe it will be possible to show a carefully worked-out and well-financed plan to destroy the Democratic Party, or more accurately the Fair Deal section of the party, using the Flynn book as the chief weapon of propaganda.

Indications are, according to committee investigators, that 10 million copies have been distributed thus far in addition to magazine reprints. The Committee for Constitutional Government is reported to have sent out 670,000 copies and the American Medical Association 1,500,000.

According to present plans, Flynn will be called to testify. He is to be asked about reports that he entered into a contract for a large lump-sum payment to write The Road Ahead, which is a denunciation of most of the measures associated with the concept of the welfare state.

Lobby Committee investigators have evidence indicating that several wealthy individuals in Texas and Colorado, who are personally paying for the distribution of large numbers of the Flynn book, are also supplying funds to aid Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin in his attacks on the State Department. The McCarthy help is being funneled in part at least through the Nationalist China lobby. If current leads can be proved up through further investigation, the committee intends to look into that lobby, which has generally been considered to be the most flourishing and well-heeled in the whole roster.

UNDER attack, the Committee for Constitutional Government is making a loud outcry about the violation of the rights and freedom guaranteed under the Constitution. A letter appealing for funds quotes the Bill of Rights: "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press" and again, "the right of people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable search and seizure."

Interestingly enough, this same Bill of Rights and other constitutional guarantees were invoked by the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee. In repeated appeals the same arguments in behalf of the right of privacy and the right of free speech were raised.

An important distinction can, of course, be made—the Anti-Fascist Committee is linked by the Attorney General to communism and the Communist conspiracy. But the fact remains that the contempt charged against the Anti-Fascist Committee appears to be based on the same refusal to produce private papers that the Committee for Constitutional Government may eventually be found guilty of.

I do not like to see people put in jail for their ideas or their political beliefs, whether they are of the extreme right or the extreme left. Such a precedent is exceedingly dangerous to all of us who cherish the freedoms that have made this Nation great. It is dangerous in particular because freedom is indivisible. If you jail the members of one unpopular group for its ideas, sooner or later you will jail another unpopular group and finally all who dare to think and to speak.

Wood Denies Fee Charges Of Pearson

Atlanta, June 13 (AP).—Representative John S. Wood (D., Ga.) says Columnist Drew Pearson has used smear tactics in charging that the Congressman's office profited from passage of a special bill to aid a crippled youth. He flatly denied Pearson's charges.

The bill obtained $10,000 in Federal funds for Ralph Stanfield, who was struck by an Army truck at Tate, Ga., in 1944.

Pearson charged Stanfield was "persuaded to pay an unjust fee to Congressman Wood's law partner and congressional employe," Carl Tallant.

Wood replied in a statement yesterday:

"The first knowledge I had of the Stanfield case was when Mr. D. Carl Tallant, an attorney of Canton, Ga., sent me certain affidavits from witnesses to an accident in which an Army truck struck and severely injured this boy."

The Congressman said he then introduced the special bill to obtain payment for Stanfield.

Wood said Tallant also served the Stanfield family in some guardianship proceeding and "he charged a fee of 10 percent for his services."

"The entire transaction seems to have been perfectly regular and above board," the Congressman added.

Doherty Retires Today As Carnegie Tech Head

Pittsburgh, June 13 (AP).—After presiding at the Carnegie Institute of Technology's largest commencement Wednesday, 65-year-old Dr. Robert E. Doherty will step down as the institution's president and take up a life of oil painting.

Some 1000 graduates will be given degrees.

Dr. Doherty, who headed Carnegie Tech 14 years, will be succeeded by Dr. J. C. Warner, former vice president of the institute.

U. S. Lead Buying To Be Reduced

A cut in Government buying of lead for the defense stockpile will begin July1, but zinc purchases will keep on at about the present rate.

The Munitions Board so told an advisory committee for the nonferrous metals industry at a meeting yesterday at the Pentagon.

The Defense Department said committee members had asked the board to consider tapering off buying so as to reduce the immediate effect on the lead industry. The supply of lead is now plentiful.

But zinc is scarce and the supply is expected to be even shorter over the next few months.

manager and a stockholder of the Journal and Herald when those newspapers were sold to former Gov. James M. Cox and merged with the Dayton Daily News in 1949. Sweeterman was associated with the Dayton, Ohio, papers from 1928 until 1949. He was born in Dayton in 1907, educated in Dayton parochial schools, Miami Jacobs Business College and the University of Dayton.

Active in community life, Sweeterman is a past president of the Rotary Club, president of the Community Welfare Council, president and treasurer of Dayton Catholic Charities, a member of the board of directors of the Dayton Chapter of the American Red Cross, and a member of the Dayton Country Club and the Engineers Club. He married Jeanne Finn of Ridgewood, N. J., in 1935 and has two children, Carol, 11, and Anne, 7.

In the announcement Graham said: "This expansion of our executive staff is a natural result of the continuing growth of The Washington Post and WTOP. Our advertising volume is more than four times what it was when Eugene Meyer bought the newspaper 17 years ago. Our circulation is more than three and one half times as large it was then, and has increased more than any other Washington paper's in the last three years. In the radio field, WTOP has established leadership, with the largest listening audience in Washington.

New Post Building

"The completion of the new Washington Post building this fall will give this area a wholly modern newspaper plant. We are expanding our management organization as another part of the program Mr. Meyer announced in 1933 'steadily to improve the Post.'

"Management responsibilities have been greatly enlarged by the incorporation of The Washington Post in 1947, the acquisition of control of WTOP, Inc., in 1949, construction of the new building in 1950, and the ever increasing size of our organization. In meeting these responsibilities, we have long been anxious to enable Mr. Boysen, with his long experience in the management of this newspaper, to give his primary attention to principal policy matters of the corporation.

"Mr. Sweeterman is an experienced newspaper executive with a record of fine accomplishment. We are glad to welcome him to our organization and his family to our community."

Hartley Plans Rightist Group

Fred A. Hartley, jr., yesterday quit as head of the Tool Owners' Union and started a movement for a right-wing political organization to rival the CIO's PAC and the AFL's Labor League.

Hartley, a former Republican member of Congress from New Jersey, said he was confident there was a groundswell throughout the U. S. for a right-of-center political group. He said the big labor groups like the CIO with its Political Action Committee and the AFL with its Labor League for Political Action were seizing the initiative and those he termed the right-wingers had better start "ringing doorbells."

Hartley said he had found most people were in favor of the Taft-Hartley Act.

"Thousands upon thousands," he said, have indicated they would have gone even further than the Taft-Hartley Act in curbing activities of labor unions.

KNOW YOUR WATERWAYS

Aids to Low Cost Distribution

Proper distribution of the nation's products among its people is one of the principal domestic problems of the nation. Low cost water transportation is an essential in its solution. Many bulk materials, commodities, agricultural and manufactured products widely used can be moved by water at lowest costs. Access to the seas and the Great Lakes, to the intracoastal and inland waterways are great commercial advantages. Such low-cost transportation is possible for many locations now without it; only initiative and development are necessary—exemplified by Houston, Texas, with its ship channel to the Gulf. Cyrus Eaton, widely known industrialist and capitalist, said before a Senate sub committee on November 8, 1945: "I would like to know who was responsible for putting it (a steel plant) 40 miles away from water."

When continued development of our waterways will strengthen the nation, benefit the people, and aid other systems of transportation through transhipment, why should reasonable appropriations for such improvements be bitterly opposed from certain quarters year after year?

One speck of RUST can clog your carburetor jet

Even one speck of rust or corrosion can stall your motor by clogging one of the tiny carburetor jets.

Why rust? Why corrosion? Because there's water in your gasoline tank—yours and everybody else's—water formed when the warm, moist air inside your tank condenses on the cooler metal top and sides, causing rust and corrosion throughout your fuel system when you use ordinary gasoline.

District Bar Elects Morgan President

Jo V. Morgan, 62-year-old former Civil Service Commissioner of Montgomery County and one-man Board of Tax Appeals for the District, was elected president of the District Bar Association yesterday.

Morgan

The Edgemoor, Md., lawyer in private practice drew 567 out of a total of 1338 votes to defeat John L. Laskey, the incumbent, and Edgar J. Goodrich.

Goodrich had 444 votes, and Laskey 327.

Results were announced last night at the annual meeting of the association in the Mayflower Hotel. Others elected were:

Richard W. Galiher, first vice president; James C. Toomey, second vice president; Justin L. Edgerton, secretary, and W. Cameron Burton, treasurer.

Ralph A. Cusick, Una Rita Morris, assistant corporation counsel for Juvenile Court, and Roger Robb, former assistant U. S. Attorney, were elected directors of the association.

Named as delegates to the American Bar Association were Austin F. Canfield, Wilbur L. Gray and Francis W. Hill, jr.

Born in Leonardtown, Md., Morgan attended Holy Cross College, and took his LL.D. degree at Georgetown Law School in 1909.

Morgan was named as the Board of Tax Appeals upon its creation in 1938.

He returned to private practice in 1943 and was named to the Montgomery County post two years later. Morgan resigned that job in 1948.

Morgan is married and has two sons, Jo V. Morgan, jr., a Washington attorney, and David Morgan, a University of Maryland sophomore; and a daughter, Mrs. William H. Olsen of Ann Arbor, Mich.

A check for $803.55, made of contributions from individual members of the association, was presented to Elphonze W. Freeman in appreciation for his 50 years of services in the association's library.

Appointed a messenger in 1900 at the age of 16, Freeman rose to assistant librarian in 1910, and to his present post as librarian in 1922.

Transfers on Local Buses Sought in Alexandria

Alexandria officials plan to meet with the A. B. & W. bus company soon to discuss the possibility of bus transfers for city patrons.

The City Council last night adopted a resolution introduced by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley asking appointment of a committee to discuss transfers and fares with the bus company.

Beverley said that mny city residents must pay two or even three separate fares to get to their work under the present system.

The call for transfers arose after the Virginia State Corporation Commission granted an intrastate fare increase from 30 to 50 cents for four tokens.

Councilman James M. Duncan, jr., said the company had indicated in informal discussions that it was aware some change is necessary.

Beverley and Roy C. Bragg were named to the committee, which will also include City Manager W. Guy Ancell and City Attorney V. Floyd Williams.

In another action, the council approved on its first reading an ordinance to ban firing air rifles within the city limits. A public hearing on the bill will be held at the next council meeting on June 27.

A proposed ordinance which would make self-service gas stations illegal was again referred to committee. The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce opposed the plan, contending in a resolution that Alexandria already has too many gas stations and that lower prices of the self-service stations might lead to a price war.

The council authorized the city sergeant to spend $200 for new equipment. Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim said that the sergeant now has only one pair of handcuffs, and guards must furnish their own firearms.

Nominated to fill two vacancies on the school board were Josiah Everley and Edward Reed, incumbents, and the Rev. David Miles and Dr. O. D. Durant. Terms of Reed and Everly expire on June 30. Names of two of the candidates will be presented for election at the council's next meeting.

Final approval was given to an ordinance providing for payment of a city Director of Planning and Employes to carry out the city planning commission's work.

Manager Plan For Fairfax Gains Support

Strong sentiment for a county manager form of government in Fairfax County was shown last night at the first in a series of public meetings on the county's administration.

The meeting was conducted at the Lorton School by a recently created commission, directed by the county supervisors to study possible changes in the present form of government.

The county manager plan drew the most support of all proposals advanced at the meeting, attended by 75 persons. There was virtually no expressed approval of the existing supervisor form.

Among speakers who advocated the county manager plan was Hillis Lory, of Fairfax Station, a member of the Far Eastern Bureau of the State Department. Lory, former professor of county government at Stanford University, compared the county manager plan to the operation of a big business, in that a trained manager is employed by a board of directors.

Others supporting the plan were Edward Gibbons, president of the Fairfax Taxpayers Advisory Association; H. A. Ward, former president of the Federation of Fairfax County Civic Associations, and George Kirkley, who has been associated with both the Taxpayers Advisory group and the Civic Federation.

There were no replies from the audience or the commission when one woman asked for an explanation of the advantages, if any, of the present administration.

State Senator Andrew W. Clarke, a member of the commission, explained that its members were assembled merely as a fact-finding body and had not yet reached any definite conclusion on the best form of government for the county.

The next in the series of meetings will be held Friday at 8 p. m. at the Bailey's Cross Roads fire house.

Arlington Police, Fire Exams Scheduled

Examinations for 10 new policemen and 11 new firemen, to be added to the Arlington County payroll July 1, will be held Friday at 8 p. m. in the Washington Lee High School, 4035 N. 13th st. Arlington.

Fresh Cabbage Juice Suggested For Peptic Ulcers

Washington, June 14, — The above heading appeared in an (AP) newspaper article which reads as follows: A remarkable speedup in the healing of peptic ulcers when treated with new cabbage juice was reported today by a California scientist.

In the first test of its kind on human beings, 31 patients, some with ulcers of long standing, received the cabbage juice treatment. Each drank about a quart of juice daily. In 11 cases the ulcers disappeared in six to nine days, said the scientist. He reported the tests in California Medicine, an official journal. One case required 23 days of treatment.

The tests indicate, but do not prove, the scientists said, that ray cabbage juice contains an unidentified substance which plays a specific role in the healing of peptiulcers."

Pure fresh cabbage juice and other fresh vegetable juices may be had in Washington from the Vita Food Co., at 3040 14th st. nw. or at the C & O Food Store, 519 11 st. nw., CO. 2980.

My Dad says: "We're All Americans!"

AT EARLY DUSK on the front steps...or in the school yard...in the friendly chatter of young America...here's where democracy starts. And with a quote from that unquestioned authority on all things, Dad!

What a real job this gives the father of a growing boy. To see that his words, as they come from his son's lips, spell out democracy's truths. That they nip off the intolerances and the prejudices of modern life. That they encourage good will and the democratic decency expressed in the words: "We're all Americans!"

And what an even bigger job for Dad! To see that his words are daily supported by fitting action. That he conducts himself as a good citizen, a good neighbor, a good father who fully lives up to the personal responsibility which every freedom big or small demands.

The freedom to enjoy the luxury of drink is a small freedom. Yet, to abuse it, to forget wise moderation in foolish over-indulgence is to fail to understand the meaning of all freedom.

That's why we of The House of Seagram, this Father's Day, add to our many public statements on moderation an earnest salute to every American Dad.

For we know that, be it the practice of moderation, the practice of forbearance, or honor, or justice, he appreciates his responsibilities. He does his job. And does it well.

He understands and he makes his family understand that to enjoy freedom, any freedom, you must deserve it.

D.C. Committee Seen Backing Rent Control

House District Committee approval is expected today for an extension of District rent control.

Committee leaders predicted the group, in a meeting scheduled for this morning, would follow the signals raised by House passage yesterday of a national rent control extension bill.

Members generally have indicated willingness to do for the District what Congress does for the country. Principal proposal before the committee is the District government's request for another year of the present rent law, minus controls on furnished nonhousekeeping rooms.

The bill would continue rent control from the present expiration date, June 30, through June 30, 1951.

McMillan Amendment

District Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) said he would propose an amendment that would keep the law in effect until the end of this year, and leave it up to the District Commissioners to continue or remove controls for part or all of the period from January 1 through June 30, 1951.

The formula proposed by McMillan is similar to the local option feature of the Senate approved Federal control bill. The House bill calls for seven more months of Federal control, plus five additional months by local option.

How Members Voted

In yesterday's House vote approving Federal control extension, 11 members of the District Committee voted "no" to 9 voting "yes." But some of the "no" voters on the national bill were members who have indicated support for District rent control if controls stand for the rest of the country.

Meanwhile, congressional aides turned up a loophole in the Federal rent control extension bill that could leave Silver Spring and Bethesda without access to rent control for the month of June, 1951, when other urban communities may be having rent control by local option.

In Maryland Counties

A check of Maryland and Federal officials indicated that the incorporated communities of Prince Georges that still have rent control could keep it under the national bill by exercise of local option covering the six months from January 1, 1951 to June 30, 1951.

But in Montgomery, the officials indicated belief the national bill would not give the unincorporated communities of Silver Spring and Bethesda, nor Montgomery County, itself, the local option for 1951 rent control under the national bill.

Officials said Montgomery County could take advantage of a State enabling or "standby" law to invoke rent controls for the period from January 1 to June 1, expiration date of the State law.

Richmond Voters Reject Expressway

Richmond, Va., June 13 (AP).—Richmond voters today turned thumbs down on the proposed expressway for east-west and north-south traffic through the Old Dominion's capital city.

Returns from 45 of the city's 55 precincts showed a vote of 8808 in favor of the expressway and 11,867 against. The result of the referendum obligated city council to follow the will of the voters.

Rent Control Wins in House

The House amendment broadening the local decontrol feature to permit counties to decontrol was introduced by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.).

Another minor difference between House and Senate bills refers to controls on Chicago apartment hotels. The Senate version removes them. The House does not. Chicago is not mentioned by name in the Senate measure, but in effect the provision would affect only that city.

Both House and Senate bills are a compromise from the original goal sought by President Truman—passage of a one-year extension of the present law.

However, Chairman Brent Spence (D., Ky.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee is known to have put it up to the White House that the bill he drafted is the only one that had a chance of passage.

President Truman is believed willing to sign the compromise measure, toward whose passage Administration forces in the House and Senate put every ounce of political strength they had.

1-Year Extension Fails

The House swiftly knocked down by voice vote an amendment providing for the one-year outright extension of controls. The proposal was offered by Representative Isadore Dollinger (D., N. Y.).

mru-uWCnowisthetimefaramamam

Arguments yesterday followed the standard pattern in previous legislative battles over rent controls.

Opening for the Administration, Representative Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) charged that "unscrupulous" real estate interests were trying to defeat it.

"The people who are leading the fight against this bill live in fancy mansions," Sabath said.

On the other hand, Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.) claimed rent controls—the last of wartime controls—is "UnAmerican, unfair and discriminatory." His attack on rent controls won applause from the GOP side of the aisle.

One on the Aisle—

Wry Irish Comedy Has an Abbey Cast

By Richard L. Coe

IT'S BEEN SOMETIME since we've had one of those wry Irish comedies, and the Playhouse performs a happy duty by bringing us "Saints and Sinners."

This is by Paul Vincent Carroll and is performed by an able company largely drawn from the Abbey Theater Players. The story is about a young man whose criminal record is cleared by the resourcefulness of an old lady who puts to good use her infallible reputation for seeing into the future.

As with so many British films of this provincial nature, the scenes were filmed on the spot. These are of calm loveliness. The humor, too, has that placid good nature inimitably Irish, and it's the sort of film that will leave you feeling more patient with life than before you saw it.

Carroll here is treating of a subject that's bemused him before—the problem of the Irish clergy dealing with local miracles. The Irish schoolmaster, you may recall, wrote "Shadow and Substance" and "The White Steed" after his early tries succeeded at the Abbey Theater, and while he's since cast around for other themes, he here returns to it in a more mellow, sophisticated mood.

The young man, Kieron Moore, returns after two years in jail to the village where he'd been convicted of stealing money from the hotel owned by his girl friend's father. Attempting to clear himself and win back the girl, he finds only two friends, the canon and a shrewd old fakir who cadges gifts but not fees by foretelling the races.

The canon, having long warned the old lady to veil her prophetic genius, is taken in neatly when "Ma" (Marie O'Neill), presumably on her deathbed, foretells the end of the world on Tuesday next. He knows it's hooey, but he can't stop the gossip. This sends all the villagers into frenzied repentance. You need not be told what happens to the hero, and there are the expected romantic complications in the guise of a blonde English girl who was smart enough to link up with another villager who'd made his fortune in the States.

It is the detatched humor that makes "Saints and Sinners" the pleasure it is. The American who seeks mementoes of his late mother from the old crone and from the village undertaker has some crusty adventures that will make you smile, and the old lady's deathbed pronouncements are as humorous as they are premature.

"Saints and Sinners" in one more example of what flavor and style can do, what the broadly forced Technicolor approach can never achieve.

"SAINTS AND SINNERS." Alexander Korda production produced and directed by Leslie Arliss. Screen play by Paul Vincent Carroll and Arliss. Music by Philip Green. Filmed in Ireland. At the Playhouse.

TODAY'S the summer finale for Kay DeWitt, bound for her annual golfing-cum-singing vacation with pay at New York's Schroon Lake . . . Kay's singing those "Annie Get Your Gun" tunes in the Capitol overture this week with Roy Roberts, and whether you prefer the Ethel Merman or the Betty Hutton approach, you'll find that Kay, like "Falling in Love," is wonderful.

Robinson an Admirable Hero Of His Own Screen Biography

As he has been in the ball parks, Jackie Robinson is also the modest, admirable hero of his screen biography, "The Jackie Robinson Story," at the Dupont and the Little.

Thanks to a likable, immensely sincere personality, Jackie brings the stuff of life to a picture that could not have been made without him. It traces the rise to the big leagues of a sandlot kid but with, of course, that one added strike of racial prejudice against the second baseman of the Dodgers whose patient perseverance finally won out.

We watch the young man struggle to give up college because he's seen it has led his athletic, bright brother into a streetcleaner's job. We see him open letters of refusal in answer to his applications for coaching jobs. We go with him and the Black Panthers ball team to find that even feeding and washup time pose serious problems on the road, and we share his incredulity that Branch Rickey will have any interest in signing him.

Rickey, finely played by Minor Watson, was the man behind the hero of this real-life triumph, and the picture makes much of the shrewd, sensible advice he gave the young protege.

Lawrence Taylor's screen play and Alfred E. Green's direction are not especially subtle in handling their patently difficult aim—to show that in America, patience can rise above racial prejudice. The games themselves are not especially exciting, the Montey Stratton and Babe Ruth pictures having done far better in that department.

But with Robinson at bat to play himself, "The Jackie Robinson Story" offers the most ideal casting of the year. He's the young man who went through those grueling experiences, and the charm of a strong character comes finely through the cameras. R. L. C.

Senate Opens Debate on Security Extension

Democratic Policy Committee that it started programing in earnest the session's unfinished business in "hope" of an earlier than expected adiournment.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) even set a date for the Senate's final effort this session to shut off a Southern filibuster on the Administration's compulsory Fair Employment Practices bill.

Lucas said he will move to put aside other business to call up the apparently foredoomed bill on July 10. He said he was making the announcement a month early so all Senators can arrange to be present. (Twelve were absent when a similar effort failed last month.)

Lucas will file a cloture (debate limit) petition the same day and under Senate rules the voting showdown on cloture would come on July 12. The leadership's last cloture effort on FEPC got only 52 votes, 12 shy of the number needed. Even with all Senators present, the prospect of approval appeared bleak.

The majority policy committee meanwhile scheduled House approved draft extension to follow Social Security on the Senate program, with a bill continuing the Synthetic Rubber Act following that: Lucas again left Senate tax action "Problematic".

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) fell pretty much in line with Lucas' approval to "clean up the musts and adjourn," but demurred on two points.

He said Senate Republican leaders will insist that legislation cutting excise taxes be put in the "must" category. In addition, he said they will press for an amedment setting "peril points" below which the Administration could not slash tariffs.

The Social Security expansion bill given Senate right-of-way yesterday would increase the number of jobs covered from 35 million (at present) to 45 million. Regularly employed farm and domestic workers, self-employed persons and a limited number of Federal, State and local Government employes not under a retirement system would be the chief beneficiaries.

In addition, monthly benefits under the old-age insurance system would be raised by an average of 85 to 90 percent. For example, the average monthly payment to retired workers is now $26. The bill would raise this average to more than $48.

George said he hoped the bill would "reverse the trend" toward increased Federal and State expenditures for "public assistance" to aged and to dependent children.

Millikin said he was "somewhat skeptical about that."

whether adequate police, fire and crash protection could be maintained. The construction of new fueling facilities at the airport would be suspended.

BPR: The Bureau of Public Roads would have to lay off about 500 employes under T-T. With the road program stepping up, the President asked Congress to approve funds for 50 new BPR employes. The bureau reports it would be restricted in adequately supervising construction projects, and in making surveys and plans for future projects. The effect of the Jensen rider on the Federal highway program, it said, would be "disastrous."

CENSUS: T-T would force it to abandon its annual survey of manufactures, the annual establishment report, and the preparatory work for the 1952 census of governments among other projects.

Work on the 1950 census results would have to be curtailed although the Government already has invested millions in the project.

Meantime, on Capitol Hill, Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) has introduced an amendment to the omnibus appropriation bill to kill the Jensen rider. He is particularly fearful the reader would handicap the operation of the Government's defense plants such as shipyards and arsenals.

The Senate Appropriations Committee can be expected to reject the Jensen rider but to support the principle of the T-T amendment.

One Federal official who doesn't look for any sizable reduction soon in the number of Federal workers—despite the riders—is Chairman Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission.

In a speech here yesterday before a postmaster convention, Mitchell said it would be difficult to reduce employment in the defense agencies as long as the present international situation continues. He then named 15 agencies that were set up in recent years and made this comment:

"Nothing substantial in the way of reduction in the number of employes in these agencies is at all likely unless Congress and the President agree to do away with some of them and there is not at present any evidence that anyone is urging that sort of policy. In fact, the tendency seems to be to increase their coverage."

Gas Rate Increase Set Aside

not pass on whether the PUC decision "gives the utility more income than it is entitled to."

"The matter should be approached not arbitrarily or cynically but in a proper way," he added.

"Any commission has constant pressure—and I say this as no criticism, simply as a statement of facts. Utilities all have a force of experts who are subtly bringing pressure at all times on the commission to increase the income to the utilities.

"The court has to say that this must be handled legally," Judge Goldsborough continued. "If it is not, you're inviting other arbitrary and cynical acts by the commission."

Judge Goldsborough's decision was a victory for Vernon A. Baker, Interstate Commerce Commission lawyer and chairman of the public utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Association.

Baker took the PUC-ordered rate increase to court as a private citizen.

Baker argued that the PUC order, granting the rate increase contained seven "major errors." Judge Goldsborough agreed with him on four.

Sides With PUC

He sided against Baker, and with the PUC, in deciding that the PUC acted legally:

1. In allowing the company to amortize the $2,797,000 cost of conversion of consumer appliances to natural gas in 10 years. Baker had suggested a minimum of 15.

2. In allowing the company to discriminate between classes of consumers in establishing percentage rate increases

3. In allowing an "accelerated depreciation" of $326,344 on the company's east station, a standby manufactured-gas plant, a year which the company has said it expects to abandon in 10 years.

After the decision, Judge Goldsborough asked Baker to draw up a court order vacating the PUC order which established the news gas rates.

C. Oscar Berry, attorney for the gas company, told reporters that in the event that Judge Goldsborough's ruling was not reversed, "the company promises to pay back any money the court finds was illegally collected."

In analyzing the potential saving to consumers of the Goldsborough decision, Baker said that the elimination of the abandoned plant from the rate base and the amortization of the plant from operating expenses "will save consumers approximately $275,000 a year."

Elimination of the conversion costs from the rate base will save consumers $199,000 the first year, Baker said.

And the decision that the PUC order was retroactive "will save the consumers one month's increases, or about $50,000 or $60,000," Baker said.

D. C. Air Officer To Join World Group in Japan

Tokyo, June 13 (U.P.).—A 25-year-old United States Air Force lieutenant today said he plans to remain in Japan and promote the program of "world citizenship" founded in Europe by Garry Davis, former Air Force bombardier.

Lieut. Robert D. Farrington, who lists Washington, D. C., as his home, said his decision does not mean he has anything against the United States or the Air Force. But he added he will give up United States citizenship if necessary.

"Both have been more than fair to me," he said. "I only want to do what I can to promote the program of 'world citizenship' in Japan."

In Washington, Air Force officials said Farrington lived at 5932 3d st. nw., when he entered the service in 1945.

Farrington, who is single, said he will live on his savings.

Browns Run Streak Over Nats to 7, Win, 8-3, 6-1

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ST. LOUIS, June 13.—Have you had your irony today? After moaning all season about the lack of talent on his pitching staff, Bucky Harris now discovers that a pair of his pitchers are leading candidates for the American League All-Star game.

The fans will select with their votes the make-up of the major league All-Star teams that will face off in Chicago on July 11, but the privilege of picking the pitchers is reserved for the two managers, and two of the Nats are very likely to get into the act.

POVICH

Manager Casey Stengel can hardly ignore the feats of Sid Hudson. One of the first A. L. pitcher to win seven games, and on the basis of his 7-4 figures with an otherwise dubious Washington team, Hudson qualifies perhaps better than any other pitcher in the league.

And unless justice miscarries somewhere along the line, Stengel will also select the Nats' Mickey Harris. His 2-1 record is not very fancy, true enough, but even moderate scrutiny will reveal to Stengel that Harris has been doing the league's finest relief job. And there is a three-inning limit on all All-Star game pitchers.

IT WILL BE some kind of an injustice, too, if the fans' votes don't show the Red Sox rookie, Walt Dropo, as a clear choice for the first base job. Dropo's would be a popular selection, emphasizing the romance of baseball. The guy was a discredited big leaguer only a year ago, and unwelcome in the Red Sox training camp last spring, but he's outhitting every first sacker in the league.

In fact, the business of playing first base has dropped to sad estate generally this year. Eddie Robinson, last year's All-Star, isn't hitting .260. Nor is any other, except Dropo, close to .300. The Nats, the Yankees, the Tigers and Indians are struggling to make first basemen out of converted infielders or outfielders.

At second base, Cass Michaels has been outhitting everybody except Bobby Doerr, and they have little competition for the All-Star honors. Gerry Priddy and Jerry Coleman are as skilled in the field, but they don't hit with Michaels and Doerr.

THE MAN with the clearest claim to an All-Star post is Detroit's George Kell. He's merely the best defensive third baseman in the league and topping everybody again this year in defense of the crown he won last season. When the votes are totaled, Kell will probably poll more than any other player at any position.

Kell overshadows a passel of other pretty good third basemen, and it is that position which is probably the best manned job in the American League this year. Cleveland's surprising rookie, Al Rosen, with his 15 home runs; the A's Bob Dillinger with his big bat plus his speed; Boston's Johnny Pesky with his high average, and the Nats' Eddie Yost represent a smart crew.

The man who will probably crowd Kell for the most votes is the Yankees' shortstop, Phil Rizzuto. His edge over his rivals is nearly as great as Kell's, with a .350 batting average and all that skill on defense. This is a year when Lou Boudreau and Eddie Joost and Vern Stephens can't match Rizzuto's claim to All-Star fame.

IT IS THE year, too, when the Yankees' Yogi Berra could come of age as the All-Star catcher. He's come a long way since Bucky Harris had to take him out of the 1947 series against Brooklyn lest the Dodgers steal the series. As Yogi puts it, "Bill Dickey has taught me all his experience." Berra isn't a finished catcher yet, but he's very good.

Cleveland's Jim Hegan and Boston's Birdie Tebbetts and Detroit's Aaron Robinson are better catchers but they don't carry Yogi's authoritative bat. Of Berra, Bucky Harris now says, "He looks clumsy, but that's because his appearance is against him. He's more clever than he seems to be."

This is a year, too, when Joe DiMaggio will get an All-Star post more out of sentiment and courtesy than merit. A dozen major league outfielders are outhitting him, but the fans still love to see DiMaggio play ball and will vote for him. They'll vote, too, for Ted Williams and Larry Doby and Vic Werts, Dom DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich. And if they don't vote for Sam Mele, they don't know what a good ballplayer he is, along with that .370 batting average.

Sid Hudson, Kuzava Get Their Bumps

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

St. Louis, June 13.—The Browns extended their private winning streak over the plummeting Nats to seven straight tonight with a mop-up of both games of a twi-night double header.

They whacked Sid Hudson and Dick Weik for 13 hits to win the opener, 8-3, and then they wrested a 6-1 victory out of the Bob Kuzava.

The Nats made winning pitchers of Harry Dorish, a Red Sox discard, and Cliff Fannin. They achieved only nine hits all evening—five off Dorish in the opener, before slumping to four off Fannin.

Fannin had the Nats almost completely at his mercy. They made a route-going pitcher of him for the first time this season. In eight previous starts he had been able to strike out only nine batters. He fanned seven Nats tonight.

Yost Scores Run

The Browns were swinging from their heels against Kuzava, when they did connect. They rapped out only seven hits against him and Dick Welteroth, but a pair of them were three-baggers by Tom Upton, their eight-place hitter; one was a homer by Sherman Lollar and another was Dick Kokos' double.

Ed Stewart's single was mixed up in the fourth-inning run that averted a shutout for the Nats. It moved Eddie Yost to third, and Noren scored Yost with a long fly. Otherwise the Nats didn't get a man past second base.

The Browns leaped into a 3-0 lead against Kuzava in the first two innings. Kokos doubled and scored on Lollard's single in the first, and in the second Upton belted his first triple to right center after a Friend single.

Lollar's homer improved their lead to 4-1 in the fourth, and in the fifth they made it 5-1 on a walk, a sacrifice and Friend's single to left.

The Nats got the help of a balk by Dorish to take a 1-0 lead in the second inning of the first game. Dente singled with one out and after Umpire Boyer called a balk on Dorish, Evans scored Dente from second with a single to center.

Hudson's wildness set up a pair of Brownie runs in the third. He walked their eighth and ninth place hitters, Upton and Dorish, with none out. Lenhardt forced Upton at third on a sacrifice attempt, but Kokos and Lollar singled two of runs home.

In the fourth, the Browns upped their lead to 4-1 when Arft singled, Friend doubled to left and Upton singled.

The Nats scored twice in the fifth but fluffed a bigger inning. Yost and Stewart singled, and Michaels walked with none out. In this crisis Noren fanned with the bases full.

Mele got a home run with a long fly to center, and after Ostrowski walked to fill the bases, Stewart scored from third on Upton's fumble of Dente's grounder.

Hudson couldn't keep the Browns in check, though. Arft belted him for a triple to center and Sommers banged a single to left that moved the Browns' lead to 5-3 in their fifth.

Weik was no puzzle either. Lollar's double to center and Arft's single, his fourth straight hit, brought the Browns another run in the seventh. And in the ninth, Lenhardt whacked a homer into the seats in left after Weik walked Dorish with none out.

INSHORT . . . The Nats have made an offer for Mickey Vernon but have slim hope for any deal before the Thursday midnight deadline . .

Boston Homers Top Reds, 5-3

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Boston's Braves began a home stand tonight by trimming the Cincinnati Reds, 5-3, on homers by Willard Marshall and Earl Torgeson.

Marshall's third of the season, his first at home, snapped a 3-3 tie in the seventh and Torgy clouted his sixth in the eighth. The victory was credited to left-hander Bob Chipman who entered the game in the first inning after the Reds had scored all their runs against Bob Hogue.

St. Paul After Schnittker, Caps Top Draft Choice

Open warfare for players has broken out between the two professional basketball leagues and Dick Schnittker, the Caps' No. 1 draft choice, is in the thick of it.

Bob Foster, Caps' general manager, admitted yesterday that Schnittker was in St. Paul. The National Professional Basketball League, formed after the NBA reduced its unwieldy 17-team league to 12, plans to put a team in St. Paul.

Foster added, "I talked by phone with Schnittker and don't think he will sign with anyone but us."

Tigers Gain

Evers' Blast Beats Macks In 10th, 6-5

Detroit, June 13 (AP).—Art Houtteman survived a three home-run outburst by the Philadelphia Athletics as he paced the Detroit Tigers to a 6 to 5 10-inning victory tonight. Hoot Evers, leadoff man in the Detroit tenth, hit his ninth home run to break the deadlock and give the Tigers their fifth straight victory.

With the Yankees losing to the Chisox, Detroit took a half game first place lead.

Elmer Valo drove in four runs for the A's with two homers and Sam Chapman accounted for the other with a home run.

Even If Hogan Did Win—

Woodmont Gives Fazio A Champion's Welcome

George Fazio received a champion's tribute at the Woodmont Country club last night.

Four members and guests told the modest, baldish professional that he is a "grand guy, real sportsman and great pro."

Fazio finished in a three-way tie with Ben Hogan and Lloyd Mangrum for the National Open title in Ardmore, Pa., last week. He lost in the playoff, Hogan winning.

Arthur Sundlun, president, was master of ceremonies at a dinner reception in Fazio's honor at the old Woodmont club. A new course will be ready in a few weeks.

Sundlun said that Fazio is like another famous athlete, Walter Johnson, pitching great of the Washington Nats in the 1920s, in that Fazio is a genuine sportsman and an inspiration to all who come in contact with him.

Fazio received several gifts, including a large television set.

When it came his turn to say a few words, Fazio not only expressed his sincere gratitude to Woodmont members for their interest in him, but paid the highest praise to Champion Hogan—"the greatest player of them all, and one of the finest gentlemen in golf."

Many telegrams of congratulation were read, including one from Clark Griffith of the Nats; another from Bab Hope, who played with Fazio in The Washington Post's National Celebrities tournament, and still another from Leo Freudberg, Woodmont vice president in Florida on business.

Navy Asks Congress for Even Break With Army On Appointments Going to Football Players

Redskins Plan To Televise Road Games

The Washington Redskins are making their own television plans, independent of those announced yesterday by National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell in Philadelphia.

Bell said that 15 games will be televised by American Broadcasting Co. next fall—one game each Sunday and the championship game—to points 75 miles from the scene of the games.

Redskins' General Manager Dick McCann said that Washington is not included in that plan. The Redskins are making separate arrangements to televise all their road games, and no games will be televised here on the day of any Redskin home contest.

McCann said all of the Redskins home and away games will be broadcast here with American Oil Co. the sponsor for the eighth straight year. If the road games are telecast, American Oil will sponsor them too, said McCann.

Bell said the rule to carry live television broadcasts only to points at least 75 miles from any city in which a game is being played applied to all games with the exception of the Philadelphia-Cleveland game September 16 at Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium. For that game only, the two clubs have agreed to limit television to cities 150 miles from Philadelphia.

West Point Has Edge In Filling Vacancies

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Navy, having a rough enough time trying to catch Army on the football field, hopes the Senate will act favorably on pending legislation that would give Annapolis a more even shake in getting athletes.

The bill, already passed by the House, would revise basic laws governing appointments to both academies. It was discussed at a hearing yesterday presided over by Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) of the Armed Services Committee.

Big existing difference is that West Point may fill vacancies that occur when regular appointees fail to qualify; Navy has no such privilege.

These vacancies may run as high as 100 a year. It's easy to see that if a boy who qualifies academically and physically also happens to be an All-State halfback, it won't hurt his chances of being accepted at the Military Academy.

The way it is right now at Navy, if a congressional appointee fails, no one gets the post.

Started in 1942

Congress in 1942 gave the Secretary of War (now Army) the authority to fill such vacancies at West Point. In practice, the superintendent of the academy usually sees that they're filled. And the athletic department is bound to have a few worthwhile boys to recommend.

Saltonstall injected the athletic angle yesterday when he asked one of the Navy men, "You think you will get better football players under the bill?"

"Yes, sir," was the enthusiastic reply from Capt. W. G. Cooper of the Naval Academy.

Saltonstall pressed, "Would it improve the grade of Navy football?"

"Yes, sir," Capt. Cooper came back, "the odds soon would be even instead of about 5 to 1 for Army."

Wants Same Rules

Later, the Senator from Massachusetts said he was in favor of having the same rules apply to both academies "wherever practicable."

The bill, introduced originally by Representative Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.) also would lower maximum age limits that were raised at both academies during the war. Proposed limits would be from 17 to 22. The present limit is 24 at West Point, 23 at Annapolis.

Other advantages Army enjoys include a "delayed" examination in June which means really that a boy who fails by a slight margin in the regular March exam gets another chance to qualify. It's a one-shot try at Annapolis in April.

The superintendent at Annapolis, Vice Admiral Harry Hill, also has the power to give a second test to applicants who fail, but it hasn't been the custom.

Something that can't be overcome is the Navy requirement that applicants have physics and trionometry. It isn't necessary at West Point.

One of Navy's old hands said yesterday, "We never have wished to cry about these handicaps in public. It sounds like alibi-ing. Anyway, people rightfully can say, 'Why doesn't Navy stop crying and do what the Army does?'

"That's exactly the way I feel about it. I say Army's doing a good job—athletically and for its service. I'd like to see us do the same thing."

A member of Navy's athletic department put it this way, "It would be a big break for us if we could spot some of our good athletic prospects who qualify for the academy in every other way. Say there were 50 vacancies, we'd be happy if we could recommend a third of the number."

Senator Millard Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the powerful committee, couldn't get excited about the bill yesterday.

Said Tydings, considered something of an Army man, "I think the rules as they are should apply."

Alablue Runs Second With Ennobled 3d

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, June 13.—Lawrence W. Jennings' Winter Wheat did it the hard way for her many backers in the featured St. Georges purse today. A $3.40 choice with the crowd of 8000, Winter Wheat was straight as a string to beat Mill River stable's Alablue in a head photo verdict.

The two mares, eligible for the $25,000 Newcastle Stakes on July 1, finished a length and one half before William G. Helis' Ennobled after hooking up in a stretch battle. Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark's Alfoxie was fourth in the field of seven sprinters. The time for the three quarter mile dash was 1:11.

Shelby Clark was a large factor in the victory of Winter Wheat. In accepting his first mount of the meeting, the veteran reinsman put up a powerful ride to drive Winter Wheat along the inside rail and challenge Alablue. The pair went head and head from the half-mile pole to the wire.

Ennobled joined the two speedsters on the stretch turn but gave way when the pace became a trifle too warm. Clark flailed away with his left-handed whipping to slowly forge to the front with Winter Wheat.

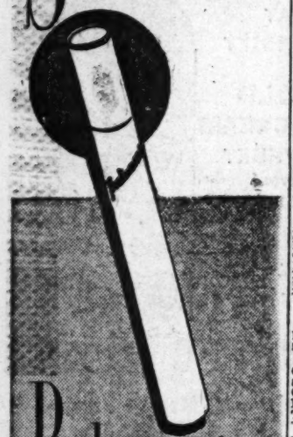
Parliament
CIGARETTES

A tip to Smart Smokers



Parliament's built-in Filter Mouthpiece insures Cleaner Smoking

Particles of loose tobacco cannot reach the lips.

No holder is necessary.

Dear Folks—At Delaware Park Justin Funkhouser, the West Virginia owner and breeder, goes out for big game with Noble Impulse. The son of Bull Dog and Uvira II, was acquired by Funkhouser at Pimlico last fall when the late Crispin Oglebay dispersal sale was held. Funkhouser has not tried the bay colt in any stakes engagements although he has two victories to his credit in the royal blue and gold silks. Present plans call for Noble Impulse to move to Monmouth Park where he will start in the Salvator Mile on Saturday. Harry Harris, who rode Phiblant to victory here on Monday in the Tom Roby Stakes, will present the cup, which is given to the winning rider, to the injured jockey in whose honor the race is run. Roby has been bed-ridden at the Mary Immaculate Hospital in Jamaica, N. Y., since 1942 when he was the victim of a bad spill. See you on the rail. —BILL.

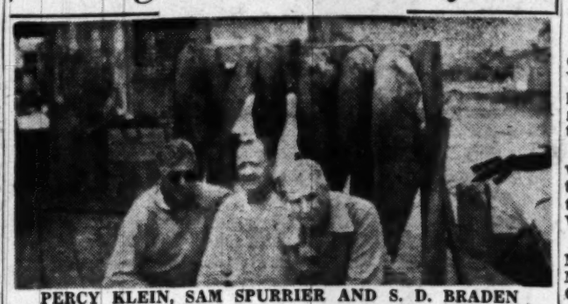
Auto Dealers Take to Boat For Big Drum Fish Party



PERCY KLEIN, SAM SPURRIER AND S. D. BRADEN
Fishing Threesome of Motor Car Dealers

By Ralph Murdock

WHEN AUTOMOBILE dealers get together, their gasoline buggies are not always the top of conversation.

And when a fishing trip is planned, the method of travel is not always by auto, especially when one of the group owns a cabin cruiser, can't get enough cars from the factory for his customers, and has time on his hands.

So they headed for Cape Charles, Va., in Sam Spurrier's cabin cruiser. With Sam, president of Spurrier Motor Co. of Arlington, Va., were Sam Braden, Washington manager for the Packard Motor Co., and Percy C. Klein, local used car dealer. At the helm was Frank Bowman, who piloted the fishermen to Cape Charles.

There they were joined by a fishing guide who steered them to drum fishing grounds at Oyster, Va. In two days they boated seven big drum that weighed from 40 to 65 pounds.

Klein said when they went in to refuel, they saw 210 drum piled up on the wharf. Those fish had been caught by commercial net at 5 cents a pound.

A MEMBER of the fair sex who really casts a wicked plug when shad fishing is Mrs. John R. Henderson, 2223 Washington ave., Silver Spring, Md.

She caught 26 shad while fishing near Queen Anne bridge in the upper Patuxent River. The plug was a Weber nitwit. Mrs. Henderson said that the hickories hit on both the green and yellow bait.

Mrs. Henderson was accompanied by her husband who also nailed 21 of the scrappers. It was a great day for the "Casting Hendersons," who bagged 47 shad in a few hours.

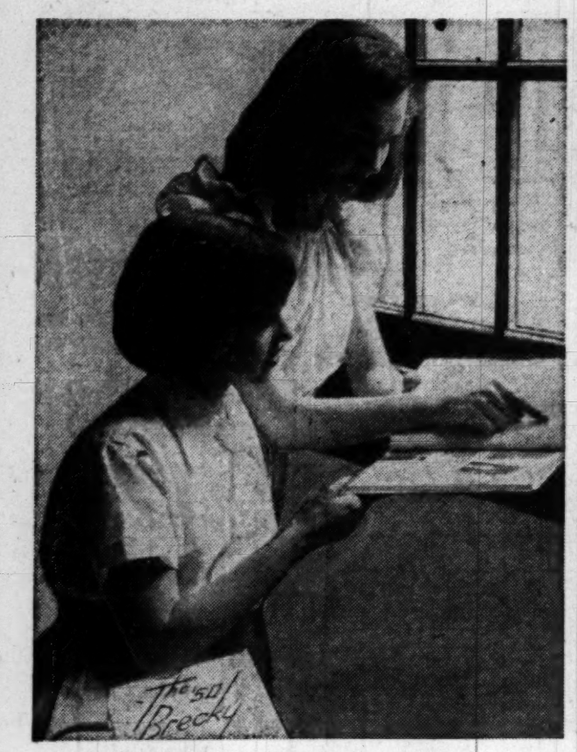
Students and Teachers Join to Mark the Final Day of Central High School



FINAL YEARBOOK—The 1950 Brecky, published annually since 1906, is examined by Pat Gibbons, 16, of 1855 Calvert st., top, and Marlene Lebowitz, 16, of 1743 Hobart st. nw. Both girls helped to get out the final issue of the yearbook. They expect to attend Roosevelt High School next semester

ALUMNI TEACHERS—Many of Central's former students returned to the school to teach. Gathered in the Morgan Memorial Chinese Room are eight alumni who before the closing last night taught there. From left are Miss Dorothea Sherman, Miss Katharine Bliss, Miss Lucy Eastham, Miss Kathryn Summy, Miss Louise Moore (seated in chair on stage), Mrs. Jeanette Kern, Miss Frances Scott and Miss Bessie Whitford

PRETTY GRADUATES—These young ladies, members of the graduating class last night at Central High, get last-minute instructions from their class president as final ceremonies begin. These exercises marked the official end of Central as a Washington institution. The building will be used next semester by Cardozo High School students and will lose its identity as Central. The class that was graduated last night totaled 198 students

Judge Assails Citizenship Candidate For Beliefs

Woman Who Said Faith Forbids Voting And Arms-Bearing Finally Takes Oath

District Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday criticized the beliefs of a 52-year-old member of the Christadelphian religious sect, and then swore her in as a new citizen.

She is Mrs. Louise Wade, 5948 10th rd., N., Arlington, Va., a native of Germany but a resident of this country since 1902.

She told Judge Curran that she would not vote as a citizen because God chooses the persons who rule, and she might vote for a person God had not selected.

She said she would not bear arms for her new homeland, because of religious beliefs, but would do "anything to prevent violence."

After questioning her closely, Judge Curran said: "The Immigration Service has recommended that you be naturalized. But I want you to know that if the Supreme Court decisions did not compel me to make you a citizen, I would not. Raise your right hand." The judge did not expand his remarks.

A tota of 41 persons was naturalized yesterday including two young boys who came to this country from Greece in 1948.

Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, speaker at the ceremony, told the new citizens "Our democracy is not perfect, but it is being constantly strengthened and improved . . . and as good citizens you should contribute to that process.

"One of the safeguards of a democratic government is an active, informed electorate," he said.

The two youngest persons sworn in yesterday were Anastios Backus, 13, and Petros Backus, 10, the sons of Thomas Backus, 1601 K st. nw. All were born in Basta, Greece, and the two boys came to this country in October, 1948.

Last Class at Central Closes District's Oldest High School

Singing the school song, "Tenax Propositi" students at Central High School last night closed the city's oldest high school.

But the students who stood on the auditorium stage for the last time stoutly declared that Central would never die.

They were the 198 capped and gowned graduates of the final class to receive diplomas from the school.

"The spirit, the teamwork, the things just and good" that are the school "will live on," Class President Robert Mackie declared.

With the granting of the diplomas the 70-year-old institution was disbanded. The building at 13th and Clifton sts. nw. which has housed Central since 1916 will reopen in the fall as the Cardozo High School for Negroes.

"The burden of carrying on the heritage and the tradition of Central is ours," said Elizabeth Anne Eilers, class historian and salutatorian.

"Some say Central is dying, but we, the last class, say no. For she will live forever in our hearts and souls and blossom forth in the kind of lives we live because of what she has done for us."

Praise for the school also was voiced by School Supt. Hobart M. Corning, a surprise guest.

"I came to see the last commencement of my own high school," the 1907 graduate told the graduates of 1950.

"While there is sorrow in the hearts of all Centralities," Dr. Corning said, "there are many reasons for you to be proud and happy. It has been a privilege for you to go through this institution and be under the tutelage of so fine a faculty."

Edward T. Dunlap, president of the Central Alumni Association, pledged that in the fall "there will be a third housewarming.

"Central, which has had two homes, now will have a third," he said.

He referred to a "lodge" that will be built by alumni to house the memorials and trophies owned by the school.

The school dipped back into its reservoir of 47,000 alumni to honor three. To Dr. Ruloff Ridgeway Stratton, 1883, School Principal Lawrence G. Hoover presented a gold edged certificate. Others honored were Miss Ruth McRae, assistant principal of Central, and Hugh S. Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High.

More Than 1500 Get Diplomas At High School Graduations

The Washington Post

MEET JOANNE AND JEAN—The misses Joanne and Jean Ong, 17-year-old twin sisters of 4332 Livingston rd. se., were among the high-ranking graduates yesterday at Anacostia High School. Both were Honor Society students and both won first honors for grades. Joanne received the Quill and Scroll Award

More than 1500 members of the high school class of 1950 received their diplomas at ceremonies in Greater Washington yesterday.

Other students were graduated from vocational and junior high schools.

Most of the graduates were teenagers. But for Miss Anna Hall, 1323 Clifton st. nw., who was graduated along with 249 other evening class students at a ceremony at McKinley High School, the diploma represented many years of work.

Miss Hall, a nurse, completed her entire high school course while attending the District's evening school program. She topped her class of Central evening students with an average of 3.88 out of a possible 4.0.

The evening school graduates, like their younger day-school cohorts, wore the traditional caps and gowns for their graduation. Not all of the 250 who received high school and vocational school diplomas were present for the program, since some completed their work at the mid-year.

Yesterday's graduations included Anacostia High School, Central Junior and Senior High Schools, Eastern High School, Roosevelt High School, Bell Vocational High School, Armstrong High School, Cordozo High School, Shaw Junior High School, M. M. Washington Vocational High School, Hoffman-Boston in Arlington, Devitt Preparatory School, and in nearby Maryland, Hyattsville, Bladensburg, Frederick Sasscer, Douglas Oxon Hill and Mount Rainier High Schools.

Students and faculty members of the Stanton School, Naylor rd. and Alabama ave. se., had a "good-bye party" for their school yesterday morning.

The building, in use since 1903, is being torn down this summer and will be replaced by a new school which is expected to be ready for occupancy in September.

Seventeen graduates will receive bachelor of law degrees from Melvin D. Hildreth, president of Terrell Law School, at 8 p. m. today at Banneker Junior High School. Certificates will be given to three other students.

Law degrees will be given to 28 candidates and accountancy diplomas to 95 at the commencement exercises of the Columbus University at 8 p. m. today at the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Justin Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, will be the speaker.

The following high schools will have graduations today:

Coolidge, 8 p. m.; McKinley, 8 p. m.; Woodrow Wilson, 6 p. m.; Veterans High School Center, 2 p. m.; Hine Junior, 2 p. m.; Jefferson Junior, 8 p. m.; Kramer Junior, 2 p. m.; Langley Junior, 2 p. m.; Macfarland Junior, 2 p. m.; Paul Junior, 2 p. m.; Stuart Junior, 2 p. m.; Taft Junior, 2 p. m.

Conference On Richitt Called Off

Maher, Who Wrote Report Charging Violations to Officer, Unable to Attend

A meeting of police inspectors with Major Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, to discuss the Capt. Anthony Richitt case was canceled yesterday two hours after it was called.

The reason given by Barrett for the cancellation was that Daniel B. Maher, retiring special assistant corporation counsel, was unable to attend.

Maher, who leaves the job Thursday, had submitted a report to the Commissioners that charged Richitt with rank insubordination, neglect of duty and being absent without leave.

Richitt has claimed that he was transferred from the Third "White House" precinct to the Eighth Precinct because of testimony he gave to a House District subcommittee investigating crime.

Barrett, once the Maher report was out, said he would refer the matter to other high-ranking police officials and abide by their decision on whether he would move for police trial board action.

Maher yesterday said he would not attend any meeting with Barrett and the inspectors once his resignation goes into effect.

"I would not be qualified to attend such a meeting," he asserted.

Major Barrett said he will ask the District Commissioners whether they want another assistant corporation counsel to present the Maher report.

Group Cusses To Aid Needy

At Bolling Air Force Base, the Community Chest has a vested interest in sin.

Everytime someone cuts loose with a cuss word in the office of the deputy chief of staff for materiel of the Headquarters Command's maintenance division, the sinner gets dunned. The kitty is ticketed for the Community Chest.

Miss Mayrovitz

Primary aim of the device, however, was not to swell the coffers of the Chest. Esther Mayrovitz, the Government girl who started it all, just wanted to cut out the swearing around the office.

Because she was getting sick of cussing at her unruly typewriter, Miss Mayrovitz early this year planted a little slotted box on her desk, inscribed with the following quatrain:

out I'll cure you if I can;
from a naughty wicked cussword
to a tiny little damn."

But under the ground rules, even "damn" costs—a nickel. A dime for a little stronger expression, and two bits for the shockers.

The box caught the fancy and the conscience of the office boss, Maj. Eugene E. Schmidt, and two others, Master Sergt. Francis D. Maybury and Master Sergt. William O. Bennett. They all joined.

Turned out to be a namby-pamby office after all. The first month there were only 30 nickels and only three dimes turned in. There hasn't been a juicy quarter's worth yet. "People don't talk that way," says Miss Mayrovitz, who comes from Chester, Pa.

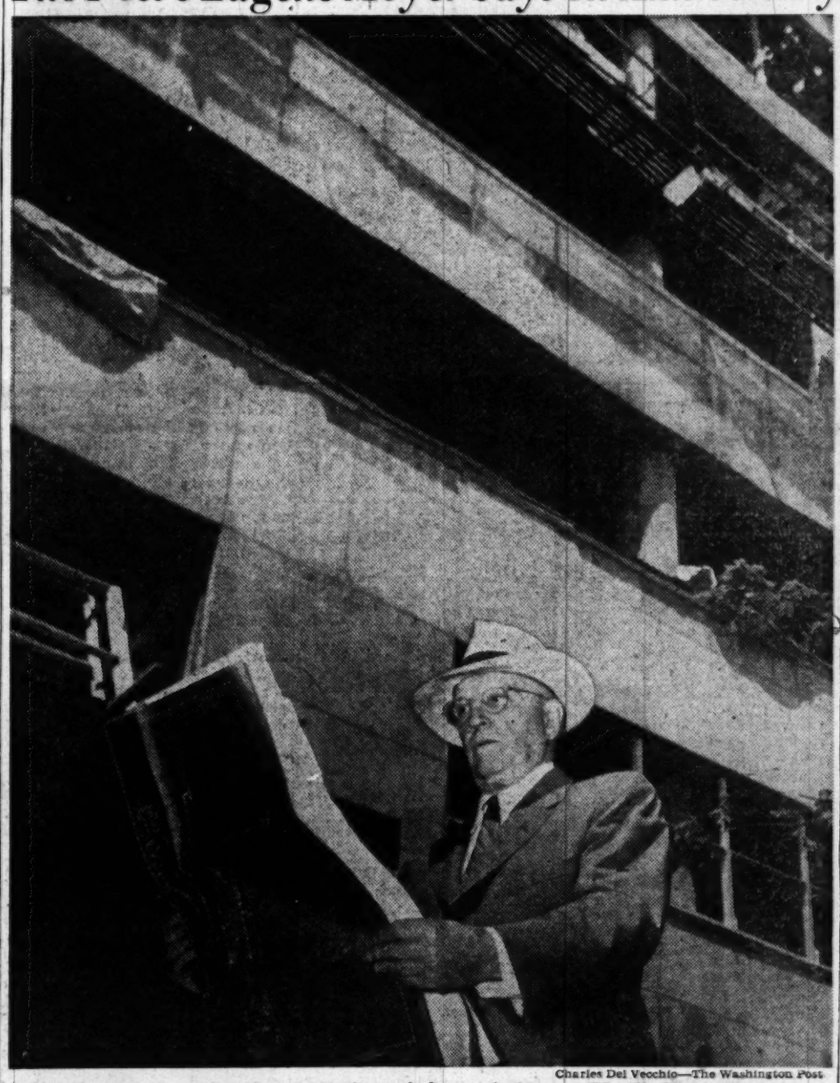
'To Tell the Truth' Is Newspaper's Basic Duty The Post's Eugene Meyer Says on Anniversary



Charles Del Vecchio—The Washington Post

Eugene Meyer studies blueprints in front of the new building of The Washington Post

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

How do you run a newspaper?

Well, there are many ways and this is one way . . .

"To try to tell the truth . . . To find it out and tell it. To have a competent editorial department to interpret that truth . . .

"If you make a mistake, admit it—promptly, fully, frankly . . ."

When you get this going and established, you go to work building the best physical plant you can get.

Eugene Meyer, just back from visiting The Washington Post's new building on L street, was talking, the occasion being the seventeenth anniversary of his buying at public auction a paper which he made into an institution.

The necessity for the new building seemed proof that the recipe might be made to work.

Mr. Meyer walked around those spanking new presses yesterday. He rode up on the elevator of the Lee House and from its roof looked across at the new gray limestone structure a-borning next door.

Quite a Sight

Seventeen years are a short time in the life of a newspaper and it was a fine sight to see.

But the important thing was that the new building started going up, not in 1933, but in 1949.

Mr. Meyer was saying yesterday that when he bought The Post at auction everybody asked him:

"Are you going to build a new building?"

It was a natural enough question from anyone who had had a look at this present structure, faithful as Man O' War but ancient-feeling as Caesar's bones. But Mr. Meyer told them:

"No, I'm going to try to build a newspaper first."

That job was to go on quite a while before any new physical construction started. Before one new stone was laid, the rise of The Post was to become news itself, and Fortune Magazine was to say that The Post "ranked among the first half-dozen newspapers in the United States."

Consider the Pace

Truth is not always, perhaps not even usually, an absolute. Especially at the pace at which newspaper copy must be produced.

But given the mechanical limitations of your business—and given your human limitations—you eagerly search for that truth.

"I believe the truth has power," Mr. Meyer said.

He started comparatively late in his life to apply this idea to the building of a newspaper.

Mr. Meyer established some sort of Olympic record for short retirement when, in 1933, at the age of 57, he ended a world-famous career of finance and Government service and made ready to observe the world from his farm in Westchester County, N. Y.

After two weeks he decided he had had his fill of the contemplative life. He bought the then 55-year-old Post at auction.

A New Concept

Old-time Post newspapermen will tell you that they got a new conception of the newspaper business from this banker; that there were two words he never tired of: "Public service."

A newspaper, he thought—and thinks—is just that. Under this concept everybody on a newspaper, reporters and everybody else, is working first of all for the public.

It is a more important idea than any physical plant.

It was the idea you remembered, watching Mr. Meyer inspect the new building yesterday.

"To be honest and to make a good product," he said . . . "To try to tell the truth . . ."

3 Escapees Sentenced To 27 Years On 9 Charges

All Plead Guilty At Upper Marlboro To 1947 Jailbreak In Prince Georges

Three of four men who broke out of the Prince Georges County Jail at Upper Marboro in December, 1947 were sentenced to prison terms yesterday by Circuit Judge J. Dudley Digges.

All three, returned to Maryland from Salt Lake City, Utah, pleaded guilty. They did not have counsel.

William G. (Tough Guy) Midgett, 26, no fixed address, a total of 14 years—three years for the escape, five for assault against an elderly jailer, and two years each on three burglary charges. Midgett was awaiting trial on the three charges when he escaped.

Robert Morris, 24, of Laurel, Md., a total of seven years—two for escape, five for assault against the jailer. Morris was serving a 120-day sentence in the jail when he broke out.

James L. Boswell, 38, of Forestville, Md., a total of 5 years—3 for assault and 3 for the larceny charge on which he was awaiting when he escaped.

The fourth man in the jail break, James C. Hampson, 24, of East Riverdale, Md., has already been sentenced to the Maryland State Penitentiary.

The four men overpowered Jailer Vincent Wells and fled to Utah. All except Hampson were sentenced to prison terms there for crimes committed in Salt Lake City.

Prince Georges Lets Road Project Contract

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday awarded a contract for one road project and authorized advertising of bids on two more.

The contract was awarded the Suburban Engineering & Construction Co., Branchville, for improving Benning rd. from Marlboro pike to Southern ave. The section, known as Boone's Hill, is now closed to traffic as impassable.

Suburban's bid of $36,470 was lowest of five submitted. The contract was awarded subject to the resolving of two rights-of-way which are now under negotiation.

The project will open a road connecting the Marlboro pike with the proposed East Capitol Street bridge.

The two projects for which advertising of bids were authorized are construction of Arundel rd., Mt. Rainier, between 30th and 34th sts. at an estimated cost of $150,000, and extension of Chillum rd. from Riggs rd. to the Greenlawn apartment development near the District Line at an estimated $25,000.

Bids on the former project will be opened July 5 in Marlboro. Plans for the Chillum rd. extension have not been completed, but it is expected the bids will be advertised within a month.

The commissioners also announced distribution of 1949 automobile license rebates to two county municipalities. Brentwood received $723.50 and North Brentwood, $391.25.

Mrs. Atwood Urges Law to Force Payment of Wages Due Workers

The Washington Post

HONORED AT LUNCHEON—Frank E. Weakly, left, employer member of the Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board, chats with Mrs. Charles H. Weston, center, new chairman of the board, and Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, retiring chairman, at testimonial luncheon yesterday in their honor. Frank O'Connor, employe member of the board, was ill and unable to attend the ceremony at the Willard Hotel

Passage of a bill to enforce payment of wages due workers was urged yesterday by Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, resigning chairman of the District's Minimum Wage and Industrial Safety Board.

Such a bill empowering courts to enforce payments not made at specified times is now pending in Congress. At present, District employers can be fined, but not forced to pay back wages, Mrs. Atwood said. Only three States in addition to the District lack such legislation, she added.

Mrs. Atwood spoke at a testimonial luncheon at the Willard Hotel attended by 125 persons to bid her farewell and welcome her successor, Mrs. Charles H. Weston.

Tributes to Mrs. Atwood's 7½ years of service as board chairman came from past and present board members, Captain Rhoda G. Milliken head of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department, and the District Commissioners.

In a letter of appreciation for her service in the non-paying job, the commissioners listed some of the board's accomplishments while she headed it: development of the Industrial Safety Division (which led to a 35 percent decrease in industrial accidents), revision of minimum wage orders covering all privately employed women and minors in the city and the development of safety codes affecting more than 230,000 employes in private industry.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Helen Willard Leads Party Whirl

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

BUSIEST bee making the social circuit yesterday was Miss Amie Willard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bradley Willard, who'll be married to George M. Ferris, jr., on Thursday.

Mrs. John Washington Davidge jr., was hostess at luncheon yesterday for the bride-to-be and members of the wedding party. That fete was followed by cocktails for Miss Willard and Mr. Ferris given by Mr. and Mrs. Willmott Lewis jr. And last night Mrs. Henry Kellogg Willard, grandmother of Miss Willard, entertained for her and her attendants at dinner while Mr. Ferris was host at his bachelor dinner.

Taylor, who has arrived from her home in Pasadena, Calif. and her daughter, Miss Sallye Taylor, who has been a student at Mount Vernon Seminary this year. Shortly after the wedding Mrs. Henry Kellogg Willard, accompanied by Mrs. Taylor and Miss Taylor, will go to Nantucket for the season.

Fiftyish Widow Is Surprised by Old Friend's Emphatic Disapproval of Her Dinner Dates With Traveling Man She Met on Train; Asks Guidance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a widow in my early fifties with a married daughter who has two lovely children. I own my home, have a responsible position with a large organization and enjoy the confidence, esteem and respect of my friends, neighbors and business associates.

Some months ago while returning on a train from a visit to my daughter's home in a distant city, I made the acquaintance of a traveling salesman, married and himself a grandfather. This man was especially kind to me on the train, and in parting at the completion of our journey together, I told him I would be pleased to hear from him, if at any time he were passing through my home town.

This man has called me twice in the past three months and I have had cocktails and dinner with him each time. On Mother's Day he sent me flowers in the name of my grandchildren.

Is It Dangerous or Cheapening?

RECENTLY I was discussing these experiences with a friend of mine of many years' standing, for whose opinions I have the highest regard. She surprised me by indicating emphatic disapproval of the whole situation. She stated that I was "cheapening" myself by making dates with a married man of whom I know nothing except what he tells me; and she said that continued association might be placing me in considerable danger.

Frankly, I cannot see her viewpoint, and knowing your fairness and candor, I would appreciate your appraisal of the situation. Please give me an early reply. K. P.

She's Indiscreet, to Say the Least

DEAR K. P.: Your attitude brings to mind two axioms, namely: 1. There are none so blind as those who will not see. 2. Convince a man against his will, he's of the same opinion still.

It seems to me that your behavior runs contrary to common sense in the matter of having cocktail and dinner dates with the pick-up acquaintance—let's call him Henry. He may be a harmless gallant whose pleasantries issue from a heart of gold. Or indeed he may be a benevolent devoted family head, whom you are leading astray to assuage your loneliness. But you don't know what his character, background and motives are. Consequently, so far as security considerations go, he could as well be a homicidal maniac as a rational gentleman.

It is a generally accepted fact of life, based on eons of human experience, that a lone woman's physical safety, at home or in transit, is largely contingent on her maintaining anonymity amongst strangers, and especially on keeping venturesome men completely outside the boundaries of her reserve. I am sure you aren't unaware of these precautionary principles and the reasons for them. But your charmed reaction to Henry's presence prompts you to be reckless, just to be with him. That's why you feel deaf to restraining counsel at present.

Better Rectify Poor Beginning

ON THE credit side of the ledger, you signify psychological health in confiding your adventures thus far to a long-time friend whose judgment you respect. If you were utterly secretive about this sort of thing, you'd be in worse danger of getting in trouble beyond your depth. Fortunately your confidante is no fence-straddler, and her emphatic disapproval of your dalliance with a strange man is a viewpoint I commend.

It is possible, of course, that her lecture is sparked by feelings more envious than anxious for your welfare. But even so, the weight of wisdom is on her side when she argues that pick-up dates carry penalties for the complaisant woman ranging from tarnished reputation to mortal risk of life itself.

As matters stand, I advise you to make arrangements in advance with some near relative or trustworthy friend, to dignify your dealings with Henry if he calls again. The idea, if he calls, is to initiate a three-way meeting at which you produce a cousin, aunt, sister, brother or old friend. Agree to dine with him as before, then ask about bringing your cousin or your old friend along because said person is on your books for the evening, or because you want Henry to meet him (or her) anyway. If his intentions can't stand that test, they're not good. M. H.

WAABI Installs Mrs. Brown

Mrs. Tillie Brown was installed as president of the Women's Association of Allied Beverage Industries, D. C. Chapter, at the dinner meeting last evening at the Shoreham Hotel.

Other highlights of the annual party included a speech by Mrs. Olive Geiger Faircloth, president of the Women's Bar Association, and presentation of a certificate of merit to the Association by the United States Treasurer, Mrs. Georgia Neese Clarke. The award cites the group's achievements in the Treasury's savings bond program.

Mrs. Faircloth told the club members that she doesn't believe there is any prejudice against women; that everyone recognizes the equality between the sexes.

The outgoing president, Mrs. Julia Kraisel, reviewed the association's civic and welfare projects during the past year, including contribution of $2600 to the Children's Summer Heart Camp Fund Division of the Washington Heart Association.

You'll Be the Big Cheese in Your Family if You Serve Up a Tasty Crumb and Cream Cheese Confection

DEAR ANNE:

You recently printed a recipe for cheese cake made with cottage cheese. What I am anxious to get hold of is one made with cream cheese, the kind that comes in small tinfoil packages. Can you supply this? W. E. G., Washington.

Another reader, Mrs. O. E. L., of Gaithersburg, Md., has just sent me a recipe of this type which I am happy to pass along to you. She says it makes enough to serve 8 to 10 persons and is very delicious.

SUPREME CHEESE CAKE

¾ package zwieback
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons sugar

Roll the zwieback into crumbs and blend with the butter or margarine and sugar. Press onto the bottom of a 9-inch spring pan. Pour in the following "batter":

2 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
5½ 3-ounce packages Philadelphia cream cheese
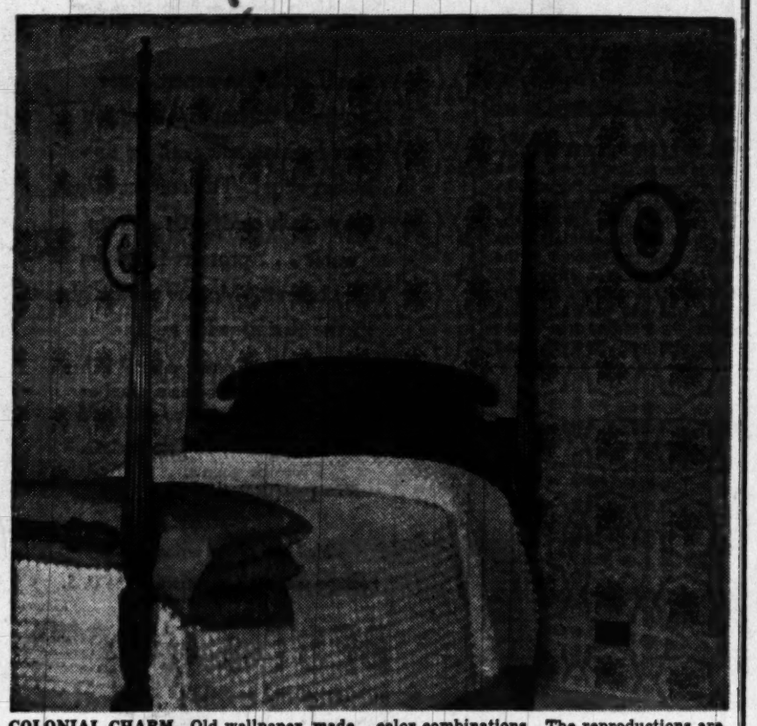
4 eggs
1 cup cream

Blend sugar with flour, salt and cream cheese. Add vanilla and the egg yolks one at a time, blending well after each yolk is added. Add the cream and mix again. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour mixture on top of the crumbs.

Bake in a very moderate oven (325 degrees) for one hour or until set in the center. Cool the cheese cake before removing the rim of the pan. Do not invert.



COLONIAL CHARM—Old wallpaper, made in 1810 and found recently lining a trunk at Chelmsford, Mass., inspired the charming paper above. It is one of a collection of documentary wallpapers recently introduced here by William J. Galligan and resembles Delft tile in its blue-and-white color combinations. The reproductions are sold here through Woodward & Lothrop. Mr. Galligan started collecting old wallpaper designs as a hobby years ago, decided to manufacture reproductions only last fall. The originals he finds in old bonnet boxes, trunk linings and storerooms

DEAR ANNE:

Can knotty pine paneling be finished with varnish? I would not want it to look shiny but would like something to protect the surface well. How would you go about it? T. P., Arlington, Va.

Yes, you can do a nice job on knotty pine with varnish. First, though, it's a good idea to give it a thin coat of white shellac or lacquer sealer. Follow this with one or two coats of flat or semigloss varnish. Sand all coats lightly except the final one.

Our Banner Bright

Our banner is the symbol bright . . . Of freedom unto all . . . At work, at play, at home and in . . . The packed convention hall . . . It represents our right to speak . . . And worship as we please . . . To choose our leaders and to shape . . . Our own communities . . . Our flag consists of stars and stripes . . . In red and white and blue . . . That tell our stirring history . . . Of faith and courage true . . . A strip for every colony . . . A star for every state . . . To signify the unity . . . That makes our nation great . . . And so we sing our praises and . . . Salute our flag today . . . And may Old Glory guard our shores . . . And always guide the way.

Jobé Says...

Yellow is following close on the heels of white as the smartest summer color this year. It gives one a crisp, fresh feeling—is like an astringent tonic after the sweetness of the pinks and mauves of the past two years.

Yellow is the perfect country color, of course—in sun and play clothes, in linens and piques for the country club, in organdy for dancing at night. But yellow can also go to town in the dog days, in shantung suits or cool silk prints, spiked dramatically with a big black hat and then black stripping shoes.

There must be a reason for it! There must be a reason why in its 25 years of existence Simmons "Beautyrest" mattresses have become such distinguished World Travelers. There must be a reason why they've been sent to Europe for royal heads to sleep on, why they've been shipped to the South Pole on expeditions, to the Orient for a Sultan and his harem. There must be a reason why they've been installed on luxury liners, used in the swankiest hotels, the leading hospitals. There must be a reason why over 10 million Americans from coast to coast, Americans who have money to burn, and Americans who have to watch every penny, have sought and bought "Beautyrest."

There is a reason. There are 837 reasons to be exact. 837 high-fired coil springs, each wrapped in its own muslin pocket, so "Beautyrest" won't be too hard, too soft, but just right. Each coil acts independently of the other, sinks down deep only where pressure is applied, doesn't drag other coils down. The result? "Beautyrest" supports you on an even keel from head to toe, enables you to sleep "on the level" as nature intended you to sleep, helps you awaken in the morning feeling wonderfully relaxed, gloriously refreshed.

Don't take our word for all this, either. Stop at The Hecht Co., stretch out on "Beautyrest" . . . and see how gently it cradles your vertebrae. And remember, for just 1½c a night (based over a period of 10 years) you can enjoy the luxury mattress that kings, that Presidents, that Sultans have slept on.

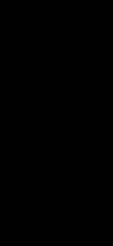
Tudor Whiton To Head Bank Auditors Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Tudor Whiton is slated to become chairman of the Auditors Section of the D. C. Bankers Association at the annual meeting tonight in the Mayflower Hotel.



Whiton

A record turnout of nearly 200 is expected at the dinner.

Whiton, assistant vice president of the Second National Bank, will succeed Fulton Dixon of Security Savings & Commercial Bank as head of the bank auditors. Whiton started his banking career in 1929 with the Second National as a runner. He became assistant cashier in 1942, comptroller in 1943 and was elected to his present position in 1946.

A native of Washington, he attended George Washington University, classes of the American Institute of Banking, the Rutgers Graduate School of Banking and has a B.C.S. degree from Benjamin Franklin University.

Other uncontested nominees are: John R. Cocker, Riggs National Bank, vice chairman; Roger S. Quinn, Washington Loan & Trust Co., secretary.

Two candidates seek the office of section treasurer. They are Eugene F. Case, National Metropolitan Bank, and William J. DeJarnette, Hamilton National Bank.

Of the following five candidates, two will be elected tonight to the section's executive council: Francis L. Sullivan, National Capital Bank; George L. Moore, Liberty National Bank; Robert E. Kendrick, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Bernard H. Prosise, Second National Bank, and Robert L. Crofoot, Lincoln National Bank. Dixon will become an ex-officio member of the council.

HONORED: Miss Francie Rowe of Washington last night was installed as president of the Credit Women's Breakfast Clubs of North America at the annual meeting in Cincinnati. The group has about 10,000 members. Miss Rowe is credit and office manager of H. Zirkin & Sons, Inc.

ODD LOTS: The Bulova Watch Co. has proposed to help Waltham Watch Co. by offering Waltham stockholders one share of Bulova stock for each 70 Waltham shares and Bulova would put another $1,400,000 in equity capital into Waltham by purchase of a new Waltham preferred issue . . . Kaiser-Frazer Corp. announced its new low-priced smaller sedan will go into production. Meanwhile, its production of Kaiser and Frazer models has been stepped up in an effort to meet retail sales demand . . . Production of the twelfth million Frigidaire refrigerating unit was announced yesterday . . . Business bankruptcies in the week ended June 8 dipped to 164, lowest level since the first week of 1950.

TRUCK EXHIBIT: Nineteen of the latest truck models, ranging from half-ton jobs to giant Diesel truck-tractors, will be put on display today by GMC Truck & Coach Division at the Uline Arena from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. A special preview was held yesterday for fleet operators. Also on display is a 1915 model GMC, oldest such truck in the Nation, discovered in a Cincinnati gravel pit after twice being covered by Ohio River floods, then resurrected by General Motors.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ralph W. Burger, formerly secretary, has been elected president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. of New Jersey, chief operating unit of the world's largest retailer. Burger succeeds the late David T. Bofinger . . . Mrs. Ethel M. Fistere, director of the Arthur Murray Dance Studios in Washington, has been awarded a plaque for having the most progressive studio of the 185 throughout the country . . . John E. Shoemaker has retired as Washington branch manager of General Outdoor Advertising Co., Inc., after 65 years of service. He is succeeded by Frank R. Metzdorf, formerly assistant manager here . . . Joseph A. Lee has been appointed first vice president of Standard Brands, Inc., and Albert R. Fleischmann . . . Howard M. Chapin, advertising director of General Foods Corp., has been named coordinator of The Advertising Council's new campaign on Government reorganization.

COMMENT: Current view of the market as primarily an investment affair was well summed up in a comment by Lucien O. Hooper. Hooper, writing for the stock exchange firm of W. E. Hutton & Co., said in reference to advancing markets of past year: "As compared with any of those years, there is very little speculation in stocks and much more genuine investment for 'keeps.' Margin accounts now are so small as to be of almost negligible importance, and the 'small' fellow is participating very little in trading."

DIVIDENDS: Union Trust Co. declared the regular semi-annual dividend of 5 percent (50 cents) a share, payable July 14 to stock of record June 30 . . . District Theatres Corp. voted the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a share, payable July 1 to stock of record June 12.

U. S. Encouragement Of Business Urged

Urging Government encouragement to businessmen, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer declared yesterday it would be "impossible for the Government to spend enough money to stop a rapid decline" in the Nation's economic fortunes.

"Unless the businessman's psychology is right we face a drab future," Sawyer told the thirtieth annual convention of the Controllers' Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. "The key to employment in this country is enough encouragement to American businessmen so they will reinvest their profits in business."

A day-long series of sessions today will be climaxed by a banquet speech at 7:15 p. m. by Postmaster General Jesse Donaldson in the Statler's Presidential Room. The convention runs through Thursday.

Sawyer, in his luncheon speech at the Statler, asserted he was "optimistic" about the Nation's economy.

Declaring that he didn't regard the question of imbalance of foreign trade as "vital," he predicted nevertheless that the imbalance for this year would be between 2.5 and 2.7 billion dollars as compared with 5.5 billion last year.

These figures refer to the amount of "credit on our side" and the reduction would mean that foreign nations had that many more dollars to spend and that their own economies were recovering proportionately.

The Secretary also declared that the best answer to communism is to make sure of "the wounderful example of the successful opera-

Basing-Point Veto Asked By 11 From 'Hill'

Six Senators and five Representatives, all Democrats, yesterday urged President Truman to veto the controversial basing-point bill.

The President has until midnight Friday to act on the measure. It would legalize uniform delivered prices on products sold within certain zones regardless of differing freight costs, so long as there is no collusion.

The group that called at the White House yesterday said Mr. Truman is studying the bill from all angles and gave no indication what he would do. They contended the bill would ease the antitrust laws and hurt small business.

Senator Hill (Ala.) said it legalizes a device used to "create and foster monopoly." Senator Douglas (Ill.) called it an instrument by which competition can be suppressed. Representative Patman (Texas) said it would favor the national chain stores.

Senator Humphrey (Minn.) described it as one of the "most open attacks on fair trade laws" and said it would "whet the appetite of monopolies." Senator Lehman (N. Y.) predicted it would stifle free competition, and Senator Kefauver (Tenn.) said it would bring higher prices for consumers and thwart the development of small business.

Others in the group urging a veto were Senator Sparkman of Alabama and Representatives Boggs, Louisiana; Karst, Missouri; Evins, Tennessee, and Mitchell, Washington.

On the other hand, a number of Democrats want Mr. Truman to sign the measure. These include Senator Myers of Pennsylvania, the assistant Democratic leader in the Senate, and Senators Hayden (D., Ariz.), Kerr (D., Okla.), O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) and Tydings (D., Md.) They argue the bill is needed to clarify certain "accepted" business practices in common usage.

However, only 13 Democrats voted for the bill and 25 against it when it passed the Senate.

First Boston Awarded $80-Million Bond Issue

New York, June 13 (AP).—Pacific Gas & Electric Co. today awarded $80 million of 26-year first and refunding mortgage bonds to an investment banking syndicate headed by First Boston Corp. The winning bid for a 2⅞ percent coupon was 101.5299999.

Subject to clearance by the Securities and Exchange Commission, the First Boston group plans to reoffer the huge issue at 102 to yield better than 2.76 per cent.

Milk Strike Action Asked By Citizens

The District Commissioners were asked to take "drastic action" to end the milk strike, in a motion adopted by the Thomas Circle Citizens Association last night.

Mrs. Ella M. Thompson, the president, called on the commissioners to halt the "ridiculous situation which is depriving the children of the District of milk.

Mrs. Thompson, 75, was elected to her twenty-fifth term as president during the meeting held at 1536 16th st. nw. She was the first woman to be president of a citizens association.

Other officers named were Mrs. Fred J. Haig, vice president; Frank Thompson, treasurer and corresponding secretary; Mrs. Mary B. Wilson, recording secretary; and James H. Tobias and James A. Nagle, delegates to the Federation.

The group has adopted resolutions asking that the six District pools be operated by the District on a segregated policy; that homeowners be relieved of paying for water pipe repairs in streets in front of property; that the personal property tax be abolished; that the real estate tax be lowered from $2.15-$100 to $2; and that the Federal Government assume 40 percent of the District government's expenses.

Midway Civic

The Midway Civic Association last night went on record as opposing a bill before Congress that would transfer Washington recreation facilities from the Department of the Interior to the District government.

The association also voted to ask the principal of the Morgan School, 18th st. and California ave., to survey the lack of facilities at the school playground.

Barry Farms

A report of the year's activities was heard by the Barry Farms Civic Association at its final meeting of the season at St. John's CME Church, 2801 Stanton rd. se., last night.

Montgomery Building Delay Is Requested

The Montgomery County Civic Federation last night urged that construction of a $1,200,000 county office building be deferred for a year so a committee can decide if it is needed and whether it should be located in Rockville.

Spokesman for the federation was John T. Moore, chairman of its committee on public finance.

He was answered by County Manager Irving G. McNayr at a public hearing on the proposed $9,053,025 budget, in the Rockville Court House.

McNayr said a new county building is needed urgently now. He pointed out that space must now be rented in scattered sections of town for some Government agencies. Another court room is also needed now for the Circuit Court, he said.

The federation urged that $76,050 be added to the proposed budget for police, health department and Juvenile Court expenses.

Moore said $32,700 should be added to double the $100 per man pay increase for policemen contained in the budget proposal. A thorough review of the police pay schedule should also be made, he said.

Other federation suggestions, Moore reported, were:

1. That $30,000 provided for in the proposed budget for a medical center survey—which apparently will be dropped because of recent County Council action—should be added to the $50,000 emergency fund.

2. That the tax rate should be $1.95 and not $1.93 per $100.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

WHEN a blown-up paper bag, browned and crisp, is brought with ceremony to a diner in the Old New Orleans, he is about to taste the New Orleans' famous pompano. The rare Florida fish, prepared as a house specialty, is transformed by an original recipe.

We went out into the hot, bustling kitchen to meet the head chef, Basil Krestos, and watch him prepare the pompano. Krestos, a former professor in a school of cookery continental is a small man with piercing eyes. He rushes around in his tall chef's cap, but each motion he makes is effective.

The pompano, he told us, is skinned and boned; then these discards go into the sauce which is Kresto's joy and the dish's making. Butter is used in quantities; seasoning includes Worcestershire sauce, vinegar, lemon juice and sherry wine. It is browned, sieved, etc.: in short, it gets the works, which probably include incantations.

A 10-pound fish to begin with, the pompano is washed, salted and reduced to three filets. The paper bag is buttered heavily—to make it rise in the oven. Then great gobs of rich brown sauce are put in, along with the three filets and several oysters. More sauce and butter are added and the bag is closed and popped into the oven. Twenty minutes at 250 degrees, then 2 minutes at top heat put the finishing touches on the bag.

And don't think that bag doesn't matter. The crisp smell of the bag (part of which is left with the dish) seems actually to add to the flavor. The sauce is delicate and yet tangy; with the fish, it makes a rich, delectable meal.

Pompano is one of three specialties of the Old New Orleans. Smothered Iron Pot Chicken, Louisiana Style, and Jumbo Shrimp Creole en Casserole are the others.

The dinner includes appetizer and soup (their New Orleans Crab Gumbo is hot, pepperish and authentic), home style biscuits, salad, vegetables, dessert and coffee.

The stately two-story New Orleans Room is for diners who are not interested in the floor show. It has no entertainment tax.

Death Toll of 61 Is Feared In Two French Plane Crashes

Paris, June 13 (AP).—Forty-five persons, including high French officials from Indochina, were reported killed or missing in the crash of an Air France Skymaster early today in the Persian Gulf.

One was Henri Maux, a Chief French conferee on American aid to Indochina. Only six of the 51 aboard are known to have survived.

The crash of the four-engine C-54, en route from Saigon to Paris, raised to 61 the total lost in two widely separted French Air mishaps and yesterday.

A military plane disappeared with 16 men on a flight from Tananarive to Tamatave in Madagascar, the French island colony off the East coast of South Africa.

Maux, officially reported on the C-54 when it left Saigon, was not on the list of known survivors issued in Paris. A Saigon dispatch said Air France officials there refused to give any details or names of passengers but added it was learned the plane carried several important French officials in the Indo-China administration.

One survivor of last night's crash is Chief Pilot Jean Sladek, 53, a veteran of Air France who was famous as a wartime underground fighter. He was reported seriously injured.

Donaldson Defends Cut In Mail Service

United States Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson last night defended his April 17 curtailment of mail delivery, and called for higher rates on all first-class mail service.

And he took a swipe at the National Association of Letter Carriers for that union's fight against curtailment. Without naming the union, he said its statements that postal service is now inferior "brings the service into disrepute."

Donaldson was addressing another group of postal workers—the tristate convention of the National League of District (rural) Postmasters at a banquet in the Washington Hotel. More than 200 rural postmasters from Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia heard him. The league's three-day convention here winds up today.

Deficits in handling second, third, and fourth-class mail, the Postmaster General said, amount to a $435,000,000 annual subsidy to newspaper, magazine and other users.

He described the publishing business as "a billion-dollar industry" no longer in need of a subsidy.

Faced with a $550,000,000 current postoffice deficit, and with no new income from higher postal rates, Donaldson said he had no alternative but to cut back delivery service.

Woman-Ruled Pacific Isle Is Explored

Manus, Admiralty Islands, June 13 (U.P.).—Australian scientists were reported today to be investigating a tiny "Shangri-La" island in the Pacific where native men spend long hours each day combing the flowing black hair of fair-skinned women.

Sydney Sun Correspondent George H. Johnston said he first heard of the island while covering war crimes trials here. He said a party of scientists left last weekend to join others exploring the island, described as part of the Western Isles, a string of low coral-fringed atolls some 300 miles north of New Guinea.

Johnston said the Western Isles are remote from regular shipping lanes and were unaffected by the war.

Unlike most primitive races, Johnston said, the women are waited on by their menfolk, who spend hours combing their hair for them.

He said the women are reported to have beautiful figures, similar to the Balinese girls, while their faces are reminiscent of the Egyptian beauties of Cleopatra's time.

Their only dress is a short belted sarong, Johnston said.

Ex-Printer, 91, Drowns in Tidal Basin

A man found floating in the Tidal Basin Monday night was identified yesterday as Robert T. Bray, 91-year-old retired GPO printer of Baltimore.

Police said Bray frequently traveled to Washington to chat with friends at headquarters here of the Columbia Typographical Union, 805 G st. nw.

He had been reported missing many times before by a relative with whom he had made his home in recent months in Baltimore.

After performing an autopsy, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a temporary certificate of death due to congestive heart failure. Dr. MacDonald said he would withhold a final certificate pending results of a chemical analysis.

The Big Town

Broadway Newsreel: General Eisenhower buying his down-front seats to "S. Pacific" via the Runyon Fund for the 2d time . . . Ruth Chatterton, the star, whose first novel ("Homeward Borne") jumped from 12th to 6th place in the N. Y. Times best-seller report . . . Hopalong Cassidy unhappy over Life's blunder. "I do not avoid religion," he said. "I avoid discussing it!" . . . Eddie Dowling, the star, kissing an ingenue hard (on the Main Stem between 43d and 44th) last night and urging her companions: "Fergoodnessakes, don't let Winchell hear about this!" . . . Frances Dee, the deb who landed on the front pages (by standing-up King Alphonse onse), delighting the Coq Rouge ringsiders with her graceful fox-trotting . . . Valerie Bettis, the ballet star, and her bridegroom in the Capitol Theater balcony crackling popcorn paper bags all through the picture . . . Paulette Goddard and her new Cleopatra hairdo.

Midtown Vignette (Or: Point of View Dept.): A Couple-About-Town were strolling along Central Park South the other middle-of-the-night . . . "I see that old man selling chewing-gum sitting on those steps every night," observed The Male Animal. "Some woman must have done him wrong."

"Really!" said His Girl. "What about all those little Old Ladies who sell apples on street corners?"

Memos of a Midnighter: Howcum nobody's mentioned the disappearance of the lady co-boss of a midtown swank spot, who disappeared with $60,000 in cash? Sweet-charming-old-lace-&-lavender type; who took everyone in as a partner and lammed-it . . . The W. Gardiners (Sonja Henie) flew to Europe for "10 days on business." Took along only 70 pieces of luggage . . . Whittaker Chambers is $75,000 wealthier because of his Satevepost essays . . . B. P. Schulberg, one-time Hollywood top-flighter (who tobogganed on Bad Breaks), will produce his son Budd's stories about Movietown . . . Martha Raye's birthday gift to her 6-year-old dghtr.: A mink coat! . . . Marie Windsor and A. Runciman knotting? . . . Peggy Maley is mending from an appendectomy at Atlantic City . . . The Duke of Argyll is planning to tail Anthony Eden in the British divorce courts. She's the dghtr. of Henry Clews, the N. Y. banker. His next wife: Margaret Sweeny, a London beauty.

Broadway Success Story: Al & Dick's is the latest of the "most successful" midtown dining spots . . . It is located where Texas Guinan reigned in Prohibition days . . . One of the owners is an ex-choral-singer—the other an ex-bus boy, waiter, cook . . . They pooled their savings a few years ago, but Nothing Happened . . . Until "On the Town" began rehearsals across the street at the Adelphi . . . That show was peopled with many obscure but talented youngsters . . . Al and Dick offered this proposition to them. "Patronize us and when you get in the chips—pay us" . . . It was a wise investment . . . "On the Town" was a long run click . . . And the chorines "shilled" their "dates" there . . . Al & Dick's now does more biz than its entire competition.

Manhattan Murals: Eileen Wilson, the Hit Parade canary, changing a flat tire all by her lonesome on the highway near Dyckman St. Not a gentleman in sight . . . Caruso's health snack bar at 71st and Lexington. It features "Goat's Milk Malteds" . . . The little bit of Paris, the Albert French sidewalk cafe, on the corner of 11th and University Place . . . Charles Guyette, "The G-String King," on West 45th where the burlesqueens shop for their strip "costumes."

Times Square Tabletalk: Joe Louis, the retired champ, and Ruby Dallas (oft-reported his next bride) drowning it in her tears. He has resumed with former flame Carroll Drake . . . The author of the shocker, "Centaur," Mildred Hoyle Core, is socialite John Jay Hammond's niece . . . Ann Marie Whalen, dghtr. of Chief of Detectives Whalen, becomes Mrs. Lawrence Patrick Byrne on the 24th . . . Bill Darnell's click via the recording "Mississippi" got him booked into the Paramount July 3d . . . Congrats, Grandpa! . . . The Gov't of Haiti wants Victor Abrams to be Public Relations chief for it here . . . The special "By Invitation" preview of G. B. Shaw's "Getting Married" drama was suddenly canceled following the temperamental outburst by one of the principals.

Sounds in the Night: At Chandler's: "On Broadway the bigger the star the less he lets you know it" . . . At Leon & Eddie's: "She's a His-Been" . . . In the Stork: "Trygve Lie's trip to Moscow was the biggest waste of time since Eisenhower's to Berlin" . . . At Reuben's: "He's an Only-When-He-Needs-You guy."

Curtain Calls: The pianotables Eadie & Rack at Blue Angel . . . Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz at the Roxy . . . Coles & Atkins' hoofing in "Gents Prefer Blondes" . . . Billy Daniels at the Park ave. . . . Dean Martin's "Happy Feet" platter . . . And the new "Sweet" stuff ear-caressers via ABC, between 2 and 3 in the Ante Meridian.

The Late Watch: Report from Abroad by Variety editor Abel Green: "The 'Carousel' premiere in London, a better production than New York's. Most cafes feature Yank talent. Ditto Paris where Lena Horne's socko at the Baccara. At Le Lido, Carrie Finnell makes with animated French Postcards and the 4 Step Brothers kill the customers. Prices too high. Especially nighteries in London and Paris—chasing people to Vienna, Rome, etc. The Savoy (London) and Hotel Geo. V (Paree) look like Stork Club and Romanoff's, Sardi's or a Broadway Column" . . . Eden Ahbez says he's "discovered" another song hit in "Trail's End." He found "Riders in the Sky" . . . Coney Island now has a Spanish dancer who calls herself Carmen Mirenda . . . The Hopalong (Bill Boyd) Cassidy success story is best summed up in a line: A year ago he had to hock his car . . . One of the few Americans invited to parties for Princess Margaret Rose is Pat O'Higgins, a Flair editor. Used to be one of the London Royal Guards . . . Geo. Rinehart, son of the publisher, and Sharon Bonner will go down the St. Thomas middle-aisle on the 16th . . . Jane Ffohman, who has had about 30 operations since the Lisbon plane crash, is playing golf! . . . The "Peep Show" grand finale will be a huge bathtub in which all the Eves take a bubble bath.

Before You Marry . . .

Children the Greatest Fulfillment

This is the third of six articles condensed from the recent book, "Before You Marry," published by Association Press. The author has been counselor on marriage and family relations for more than 20 years. Since 1934 he has been professor of social science and religion at George Williams College, Chicago.

By Sylvanus M. Duvall

CHAPTER THREE

How well do you understand the essentials for a complete sex experience?.

As vanilla is most enjoyable when it is part of a greater total product, so sex is most satifying as part of a much larger whole. Our knowledge at this point is far from complete, but a few statements can be made with confidence.

Among the most important facts are:

Sex is most satisfying as part of a total personal relationship. Testimony from prostitutes indicate a lack of personal satisfaction in their relationships. Sex is most satisfying when it is the expression of genuine affection.

Sex is most satisfying when the relationship is stable and secure. Those who have counseled with people who have tried to get their satisfactions from the temporary affair know how bitter can be the experience when the relationship breaks up.

The danger of the "weekend trip" and the vacation episode is that they arouse hungers that they cannot satisfy. The relationship is haunted by the fear that it will be broken off just when you have come to feel the need for it most.

Depending upon illicit relationships for satisfaction is like drinking sea water to satisfy your thirst. The thirst is understandable and proper. The solution makes matters worse instead of better.

Children Vital

Going "the limit" biologically is most satisfying only when you can also "go the limit" psychologically. This last can usually happen only within the security of permanent marriage.

Sex requires children for its richest fulfillment. Nature's concern in sex is not fun for the individual but offspring for the race . . . Psychiatrists testify that childbearing is essential for the fullest sexual satisfaction, particularly for women.

This conclusion has considerable evidence from other sources to support it.

How can you tell whether the other really holds to the sex standards which you regard as essential?

The answer is especially difficult when you are just becoming interested, but do not know the other too well.

One way is by frank discussion. People who believe that fidelity after marriage is desirable, and often people who feel that it is not, may frankly say so.

Of course, you always face the possibility of deceit. Some people will agree to anything in order to win the one they want. Even greater is the danger that later on, one or the other will change his mind.

But these are risks of marriage itself. You can and should know where you stand as of the present.

A second way of knowing is the record of past conduct. One indication is the standard that you maintain with each other before your marriage.

During their engagement period, Sam suggested sexual intimacies to Doris. She declined. Sam could be reasonably sure Doris would not likely give to others what she refused to the man she intended to marry.

But how about Doris? Statements and even reputation may be unreliable, although both should be considered. The best protection is to have known the other long enough, and well enough, to have confidence in his or her basic integrity.

What if in the past the other has violated your standards?

Marriage does not change the basic character and personality structure of an individual. Will not the other almost certainly carry into married life the practices which he has established before?

The question is whether this undesirable past conduct was an expression of, or a violation of his standards. Few people always live up to their own moral standards.

Behavior Pattern Stressed

People who do not believe in losing their temper occasionally lose their own. Those who believe in and practice truth as a general policy occasionally lie.

People who sincerely believe in honesty would steal food if they were starving. It would be quite inaccurate to call them thieves. The basic question is whether the conduct did or did not express the pattern of his personality.

By personality, we mean the pattern as it is at present. For people can and do change. It is not likely that marriage will profoundly affect one's standards.

The boy who pleads that if the girl only would marry him he would be quite different may believe what he says, but he is talking nonsense. Yet it is possible for a person who once accepted one sex standard to change his mind and his feelings and stanchly uphold the opposite position.

If one of you had illicit sex relationships before marriage, should he or she keep quiet about it or "tell all?"

It is usually better if a couple can begin their marriage with everything cleared up. Finding out later may result in a disillusionment which can threaten the whole relationship.

The other person may think, "How many other things are there in his (or her) past I wasn't told about?"

Furthermore, even if the other never does find out, there is always the constant fear that he will. And such fear is like hulls in the oatmeal. It makes the dish less tasty.

Furthermore, if your relationship with the other is strong enough to risk marriage, it should be able to take considerable strain. Many young people have found that a frank disclosure of past indiscretions did not break the relationship, but brought a welcome sense of relief which actually made the bonds closer.

Yet there undoubtedly are times when bringing up a dead past would destroy what would otherwise be an essentially sound marriage. From a moral standpoint, your real responsibility is to let the other person know what you are now.

If the misconduct in the past does not represent what you really are now, a disclosure may do little good and much harm.

Presbyterians Vote to Stay In Council

Massanetta Springs, Va., June 13 (UP)—A minority move to withdraw from the Federal Council of Churches was defeated 243 to 121 today by the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the United States.

But at the same time, the 90th General Assembly adopted a strongly worded resolution condemning some recent actions of the Federal Council.

The resolution charged the council commissioners "have from time to time expressed opinions, issued statements and advocated policies tending toward political socialism in this country . . . contrary to our time-honored principles of free enterprize and representative democracy."

The assembly delegates said they considered those expressions totally at variance with the beliefs of our people.

"We therefore vigously dissent and completely disassociated ourselves from any such deliverance or action of the Federal Council," the resolution said.

Before adjourning the five-day session, the assembly ruled to retain a member of the World Council of Churches.

The Assembly also went on record opposing diversion of public school funds to parochial schools.

The commissioners adopted a budget of $3,735,812 and approved a 1951-52 budget of $4,424,135.

East German Reds Plan Ruhr Youth Congress

Berlin, June 13 (U.P.)—The east German Communist Youth organization today said it will convoke a Congress of 6000 young peace fighters" in the West German Ruhr Sept. 1.

The Communists on Sunday said they have planned a demonstration in West Berlin, at which they hope to rally one million youths, but they have set no date for this rale.

Wisconsin Ave. Sidewalk Bids To Be Opened

Bids for construction of sidewalks along both sides of Wisconsin ave., from East-West hwy. to Glenbrook pky., will be opened at 10 a. m. today in the Montgomery County purchasing office of the Rockville courthouse.

Merchants among others, had protested that the ripped up walks interfered with business while the avenue was being widened.

McNayr's report, made to the Montgomery County Council, also said that the State Roads Commission had been requested to extend a raised median strip from Bradley blvd. to East-West hwy. to connect with one now under construction.

McNayr said the project, which started last fall should be finished by July, when a study will be made to determine the placing of traffic lights.

The council adopted a resolution directing McNayr to institute a survey to determine what type of drainage will be required to eliminate flooding of the strip during heavy rains.

Frederic P. Lee, council president, said the drainage project had been delayed because of conflict over jurisdiction between the States Roads Commission and the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission.

The council also named G. Gregg Everngan, a Silver Spring attorney, and Dr. William W. Welsh, of Rockville, to six-year terms as members of the County Welfare Board.

First Eskimo Chaplain Is Appointed by Army

The Army appointed its first Eskimo chaplain yesterday to serve in Alaska. He is the Rev. Percy Ipalook.

He has the rank of captain, has been in the Alaskan National Guard and now is assigned to the First Alaskan Scout Battalion at Nome.

Three Nearby Virginia Towns Elect Officials

Fairfax, Vienna and Clifton were among Virginia towns which elected municipal officials yesterday. Each chose a mayor and town council for two-year terms.

In Fairfax, Robert B. Walker, county high school supervisor running unopposed for mayor, received 150 votes. The following were elected to the six seats on the town council:

F. Tyler Swetnam, architect, 139 votes; Fred M. Everly, pharmacist, 139; A. R. Sherwood, retired builder, 138; Ashby Graham, 137; Charles A. Munday, 126; F. Gail Landon, jr., 80. All except Swetnam and Munday were incumbents.

In Vienna, Attorney John G. Gorboy piled up 134 votes to defeat incumbent Jack J. Nichols, also an attorney, in the mayoralty race. Nichols received 41 votes.

Elected to the five town council seats were — Dewitt M. Crickenberger, 213 votes; David D. Cushie, American Telephone & Telegraph officials, 165; Noah L. Dove, storekeeper, 163; Warner R. Cockerills, insurance man, 143. Crickenberger was the only incumbent.

In Clifton, W. Swem Elgin, retired Army officer, received 35 votes in his unopposed race for re-election as mayor.

The five town council seats went to R. Randolph Buckley, postoffice employe, 36; W. Edward Detweiler, Navy Department employe, 34; Mrs. Delsie Buckley, housewife, 34; Ruell Fugett, Interior Department employe, 34; Elmer P. Ayre, Interstate Commerce Commission employe, 33. All were incumbents.

Japan Produces First Radioactive Isotope

Tokyo, June 13 (UP).—Kyoto University today said its scientists had produced a radioactive isotope for the first time in this country. The isotope, phosphorus-32, has been used successfully in experiments on guinea pigs, the university said.

Ravin' Klavan

For Gene They Stay Up Late and Like It

By Sonia Stein

AFTER a disk jockey has spent six months on a new station in a new town, it is inevitable that he take stock of his experiences, evaluate his attitudes. Like WTOP's Gene Klavan. How does he feel after six months on WTOP? "Employed," he says.

KLAVAN

Which is for sure and also terse, but which scarcely fills the column.

Klavan is a wonderfully good-natured young man with dimples who is employed—daily from 12:30 to 2 a. m. and from 4 to 5 p. m. on Saturday afternoons at WTOP, complaining about some of life's grainier problems between recordings (of a kind of music you seldom hear elsewhere, or what he calls "music nobody else bothers with.")

The nicest compliment he gets is, "You are making a physical wreck out of me," from people who stay up past their bedtime to listen to him.

A Kind of Nonsense

WHAT they're staying up to hear is largely a kind of nonsense, a mangling of the commercials, often in whatever dialect comes to tongue at the time. An announcement about an English play may be in such brittle British that it shatters. A food commercial may be in a German accent as dense as the Black Forest.

The major part of the fun is hit or miss. Discussing the articles on sale at a men's wear store, he mentions shirts, slacks, hats and sox. "Please," he entreats himself, "let's keep sox out of this!"

Looking over the menu from a food shop, Klavan says, "This menu contains a host of information. You open it up and you say, 'Oh, a host of information!'"

But each program usually contains one prepared—after a fashion—skit which may call for as many as 10 actors. Klavan plays all parts, male and female. Since Klavan reads these little gems with exquisite understanding and uses a titillating pause—something his boss calls a vocal double take—throwing them into cold print strips them of most of their charm. But even in print there is something funny about:

"Gee, all those big houses on the outskirts of town with their libraries, dens, powder rooms, counting houses . . . Of course I know that money isn't everything. Look how many headaches the Government has with all the money it spends each year—billions of headaches . . . I'd just like a couple of little shooting pains."

'Capitol Washroom'

KLAVAN knows about money. It sponsors his famous little program about politics, policy and protocol, "Capitol Washroom," with CBS Newsmen Bill Shadey, Robert Knuckles and Griffing Bankrupt. "Money," reads the commercial, "a product that has a million uses around the home, office and in private and personal relationships. Money comes in a restful green shade, in economical large size bills or the smaller packages which come in quarter, dime, nickel and penny sizes. Remember money is an American product used all over the world, so the first chance you get go out and ask for money."

The program proper, in which no questions are barred, goes like this:

Question: "Senator, don't you feel that there is . . .

Senator: No embarrassing questions please. I mustn't tax myself. I have enough trouble taxing the people."

Klavan isn't consistently funny. Even Arthur Godfrey isn't consistently funny day in and day out and he has a staff of writers and some "live" talent on the show to stimulate him. But Klavan, working in the gloom of night from his own material, works so well that it's an equal pleasure when he interrupts the music to chatter, and when he interrupts the chatter to play some of he delightful music he digs up. This, I suppose, is the perfect master plan for a disk jockey show.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Reveals His Secret Ambition

Just once before I die, I'd like to drive past the 100 block of B st. se. and see traffic moving smoothly, with not a single car double parked.

NO FOOL HE

Have you ever heard the one about the fellow who was so busy working for the "revolution" that he never had time to hold down a job?

The left-winger's brother was pretty disgusted with him, and one day tried to use a little psychology.

"Why don't you settle down to work," he suggested, "and save up about $25,00 so you can help finance this revolution?"

"Nah," countered the radical, "the revolution will come along before I reach that total, and then I'll be stuck with all that money."

MILKING A JOKE DEPT.

There wasn't much humor in the news of the milk strike until the after-hours bunch began kicking it around a bit.

Then the report began to circulate that milk speakeasies were springing up, and bottle club members were leaving a quart of Grade A with the bartender, so that they could occasionally call for a shot of cow juice with their coffee.

The strike also had its grimmer side, I discovered. I was buying a ribbon for my portable at Leon's typewriter emporium at 6th and D nw. when one of the clerks asked:

"You've heard what the purple cow did when the strike started, haven't you?

"No," I bit. "What did the purple cow do?"

"Mood indigo," came the crusher.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Six-month-old mixture fox terrier and bull; good with children." (Atlantic 3682.)

"Two housebroken gray kittens, dark markings, 6 weeks old." (Wisconsin 0468.)

"Three exceptionally pretty, housebroken, 6-week-old Maltese kittens." (Oliver 8035.)

ON BEING A PUBLIC SERVANT

Traffic Director George Keneipp was carted off to George Washington University Hospital last Thursday for a major operation.

Monday afternoon I found him going through a stack of official documents in his hospital room. "What's the big idea?" I asked. "You're supposed to be a sick man."

"Some of this stuff is pretty important," Keneipp replied. "It's got to be okayed and moved along, so that the staff can do its work properly."

Needless to add, the big lug is much improved now, and says he'll be back at his desk by Monday. And I can't help but wonder who talked him out of moving the desk into his hospital room.

PERSONAL NOTES

Lorraine Simms: Joyce Crews has moved off to 1117 W. Main st. in Salem, Va., and tells me that she and Karen Lynn need you but don't have your address. She writes: "The only way to reach Lorraine is through the District Line, which she reads every day." Hmmmm. That's more than I can say for my own family.

THIS IS WASHINGTON

Elizabeth "Liz" Looney of 2545 Waterside dr. nw. has another postscript to last Saturday's torrential downpour.

It seems that an unidentified pedestrian in the neighborhood got a thorough drenching, because he finally removed his jacket, trousers, shirt, sox, shoes and cap and hung them on the shrubbery to dry.

What perplexes residents of the area is: How did the guy get home? His stuff was still adorning the shrubbery as late as Monday evening.

BIGGER APPROPRIATION MIGHT HELP, TOO

Leonidas (Santa Claus) Beall of 6420 Western ave., Chevy Chase, Md., suggests a merger of that One-A-Day vitamin pill firm with the Post Office Department's one-a-day devitalized mail service.

POLITICAL JOKE

Latest gag making the rounds among Republicans is that the GOP needn't give up hope of getting a man in the White House, because you can never tell about Love. Margaret might marry a Republican some day.

SWAT THAT FLY

A monument I'd like to build
To praise the guy, forevermore,
Who first put screens upon a door.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Capital Wire-Tapping Cited

By Drew Pearson

A sensational report on wire-tapping in the Nation's Capital is now in the hands of the Justice Department, but for some strange reason so far has been suppressed.

Pearson

The report, prepared by the Metropolitan Police, indicates that Washington, D. C., has been going in for the same police state methods we are opposing in Europe. Two of the worst offenders are leading Republican Senators, Owen Brewster of Maine, and Homer Ferguson of Michigan.

The report, which resembles a detective-story thriller, tells how Senators Brewster and Ferguson tapped the telephone of Howard Hughes, head of Trans-World Airlines, when Hughes was summoned to Washington for a Senate hearing.

There was not a thing that Hughes said while in Washington that the snooping Senators did not listen to. Not only was his phone at the Mayflower Hotel tapped from the day he set foot in the Capital, but the Senators rented a room just above Hughes and dropped an electronic-induction microphone down an air vent to pick up conversations between Hughes and his lawyers.

The "mike" they used was so sensitive that it could pick up conversations 700 feet away. These were all recorded on wax discs.

Under the law, a man's conversations with his lawyer are held privileged and cannot be revealed in court. However, this made no difference to the two Republican eavesdroppers.

Argentine Embarrassed

Justice Department officials, when queried about the report, admitted that Senator Brewster had phoned Morris Fay, United States attorney for the District of Columbia, had asked to use Lieut. Joe Shimon of the Metropolitan Police force, then attached to the district attorney's office. Fay refused to have anything to do with the matter, whereupon Brewster called Maj. Robert Barrett, head of the Metropolitan Police, and secured the use of Shimon.

Lieutenant Shimon is the expert wire-tapper who also figured in some eavesdropping on the Argentine Ambassador. In this case, Shimon was acting for Nathaniel Luttrell scion of a wealthy Washington, D. C., family, who had reason to suspect his wife, the former Nina Lunn, granddaughter of former Senator White of Maine.

The fact that a Washington police lieutenant was used as a private detective on a foreign Ambassador was one thing that helped inspire the report on Gestapo methods in the Nation's Capital.

Actually, the Justice Department's record on wire-tapping is good. J. Edgar Hoover leans over backward against such methods, uses them only in espionage, kidnaping and other serious cases. Telephone tapping is indiscriminately practiced, however, by the Armed Forces, Central Intelligence, and apparently by Brewster and Ferguson.

Incidentally, Howard Hughes made monkeys of both Brewster and Ferguson, especially after it became known that Brewster had been pulling wires for Pan American Airway and favored a merger between Pan American and Hughes' TWA—which Hughes had rebuffed.

Harry Cain's Health

Washington's real estate Senator, Harry Cain, was attending a dinner in honor of Chief Justice Fred Vinson shortly before his filibuster.

Under Washington, D. C., protocol, which is strictly followed when anyone as high-ranking as the Chief Justice is present, no one leaves a dinner until after the guest of honor. When he departs, any other guest is free to leave also.

At this particular dinner, Senator Cain went up to Chief Justice Vinson quite early in the evening and said:

"I hope you won't mind if I leave before you do. You see, I have to consider my health."

Vinson, who has never paid attention to protocol, assured the Senator that he didn't mind a bit and suggested that the best thing in the world, if he wasn't feeling well, was a good night's sleep.

But 30 minutes later, the Chief Justice, dropping in at the home of Eugene Meyer, chairman of the board of The Washington Post, was surprise to see the same Senator who had gone home to "take care of his health." His health appeared O. K. and he seemed to be enjoying himself thoroughly until the Chief Justice arrived.

Naked Democracy

A story of democracy was told by popular Gov. Okey L. Patteson of West Virginia at lunch in the Senate restaurant recently.

The Governor said he went to the Charleston YMCA for a steam bath, and when the mist cleared, he noticed several figures in the room, among them a small, elderly man.

The stranger stared at Patteson, then said in a broken accent, "You are the Governor, aren't you?"

Patteson nodded.

"This is the only place in the world," continued the elderly man, "where a Governor and an immigrant could sit side by side in a steam bath. I come from Russia. In my village, the mayor would not dream of associating with the common people. He would be afraid of someone shooting him or stabbing him while the steam filled the room. Are you not afraid?"

Then, before Governor Patteson could answer, the refugee concluded: "This is a democracy which Europeans have no idea exists in America. I wish there was some way we could tell them."
